Chances for developing a major international airport on the south side of Hampton Roads in future years are being hurt by some "powers that be" in Norfolk, according to informed sources.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN was told by persons familiar with long-range needs in the area that some in Norfolk are still clinging to the idea of developing an international airport at Craney Island.

Meanwhile, there is talk in the airlines industry of the future need for a major international airport between New York and Miami, and Charleston, S.C., might get by default. This has led to speculation that officials in Virginia Beach, Portsmouth and Chesapeake might get together to plan a new airport on the south side of Hampton Roads in a location where it would have room to grow into international stature.

Patrick Henry Airport on the Newport News-Hampton side of Hampton Roads is growing, and some say it could develop into an international airport. This could happen if the federal government for its development plans, had to choose between Norfolk Municipal and Patrick Henry.

The Craney Island plan, based on material dredged from Hampton Roads ship channels to build an airport site, is now obsolete, one informed source said. It would take perhaps a half dozen years to build the site, plus years for the material to dry out to allow construction.

Norfolk Municipal Airport is too hemmed-in by development around it to allow for expansion to meet future jet requirements, much less large planes used today as commercial air carriers.

As a sidelight to the story of airport planning south of Hampton Roads, some in the airlines industry wonder whether revenue from Norfolk Municipal has been put back into developing the airport.

"Where is the money going?" one industry source said. "No one has explained it." Airport revenue includes that from space rental, concessions, parking and landing fees, among other things.

Such major air carriers as National and United now use Norfolk Municipal, Piedmont and Allegheny also fly in and out of there, as do non-scheduled lines and private planes.

While United and National are domestic trunk carriers, in the Civil Aeronautics Board's classifications, they also are international and territorial carriers.

The aircraft industry in this country is developing large jets, such as the Boeing 747, which is expected to carry over 400 passengers and may be operational by 1970. It also is scheduled to be used as an all-cargo aircraft by 1971.

Incidentally, the Flying Tiger freight line reportedly wants to fly in and out of Norfolk Municipal Airport.

Whether officials of major airlines in the nation have ever considered this area for a regional airport could not be learned by SUN presstime.

One informed source who ranks high in area business circles summed it up this way: "While our area south of Hampton Roads has awakened to its growth problems on highway, rail and seagoing transportation, the area's main problem in the jet age could be the lack of plans for an international airport."

State Office Proposed For Beach Veteran Aid

RICHMOND, VA.--The Virginia Division of War Veterans Claims is proposing to locate an office in greater Virginia Beach and has asked Gov. Mills E. Godwin for a 21 per cent increase in the division's budget for the state biennium starting next July 1.

An increasing number of veterans from the Vietnam war has been cited by Harry F. Carper Jr., state director of the division, as one reason for a need to increase the operating budget.

The nearest state claims office for Virginia Beach veterans and dependents now is in Norfolk. The area director, Maurice Hunger, told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN about one-third of the claims handled by his office are in Virginia Beach.

Because of this, Hunger sets up a desk at Virginia Beach Civic Center the 2nd and 4th

Thursday of each month to receive claims. He said Virginia Beach veterans received about

Hays Meets With Teachers

While public school students are having a holiday here Friday, Oct. 6, many Virginia Beach teachers will be attending the Virginia Education Association annual District L Convention at the Center Theater in Norfolk.

Former Congressman Brooks Hays of Arkansas is scheduled to be the main speaker.

$800,000 in benefits from the federal government during the fiscal year which ended last June 30.

The increase requested in the state division's operating budget, now about $1.8 million annually, also includes a new office proposed for Richlands, Va. There presently are 19 division offices in Virginia.

Gates R. Richardson, past commander of the American Legion Department of Virginia, recently estimated the Virginia War Claims Division is securing $37 in federal money for veterans and dependents in the state for each dollar the state agency spends for operations.

Wilbur Walker, department adjutant, said there are more than 500,000 veterans in Virginia and about 1,000,000 dependents. The American Legion is backing the War Claims Division budget request.

Beach Building Values Top $6 Million in Sept.

PR. ANNE BOROUGH--Construction activity continued on the rise in greater Virginia Beach during September, as the city government issued building permits for jobs valued at $6.2 million, more than double values for the same month last year.

The September report from city building officials pushed the number of permits thus far this year here to 2,350, and values to $36.6 million. Both figures are ahead of 1966 figures by the same time.

September permits numbered 258, compared to 216 the same month last year, included in this year's September permits were 134 for single-family houses valued at $2.6 million, 9 permits for new commercial structures valued at $901,130 and two for municipal buildings valued at $1.5 million.

The municipal buildings are a new City Hall and a Welfare Building at the Virginia Beach Municipal Center at Princess Anne Court House.

The accumulated permit total of 2,350 for this year, through September, is 179 higher than 2,171 by the same time in 1966. Cumulative values of the buildings and other structures permitted is $4.5 million above the 1966 figure of $32,064,794.

Federal construction projects are not included in the city's building permit figures.

Where expressway users will get on and off

This sketch of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk expressway and its interchanges, all scheduled to open before Christmas, is based on a brochure prepared by the State Highway Department for the toll road. Where toll booth locations are at interchanges; the charge will be 10 cents for a passenger car, or 5 cents per axle for any vehicle including buses and trucks. The toll at the mainline barrier will be a quarter for cars, 10 cents per axle for vehicles with more than two. Toll will be paid once-either at the mainline barrier, or when getting on, or off at a ramp on either side of the barrier.

Automated toll-collection booths are being built for the ramps, and signals will sound if someone forgets to put in the nickels, dimes or quarters. The expressway's west end is just inside Norfolk, west of Newton Road at the interchange with Interstate 264, to Brambleton Avenue, and Interstate 64 for points north and south. Tolls will not be charged at the Plaza (Exit 4), London Bridge (Exit 6), Seacock (Exit 7) or Newton Road (Exit 1), because they must be paid elsewhere. Cars with single-axle trailers will pay 15 cents at a ramp, 30 cents at the main barrier.

Scout Project Opens 15 Schools to Boys

An ambitious project, aimed at introducing more boys to scouting, will be undertaken Monday, Oct. 9, by the Tidewater Council of Boy Scouts of which Princess Anne-Virginia Beach District is a member.

The project, called "School Night for Scouting," will give prospective Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts and their parents a chance to learn about scouting. Fifteen elementary schools in greater Virginia Beach will be open from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. A program will be presented by the scouting units each school area.

Jefferson Davis, principal of Kellam High School, is local district school night chairman and James A. Peery is district organization and extension chairman.

Oct. 9 is also uniform day. Cubmasters and scoutmasters have been asked to encourage their scouts to wear their uniforms to school to promote School Night.

School night will be at the following elementary schools. Interested parents and boys should go to the school nearest them, Davis said. Open to Lynnhaven Borough will be Aianton, John B. Dey, Kings Grant, Linkhorn, Plaza, Trantwood and Windsor Woods; Bayside Borough: Bayside, Hermitage and Old Dominion; Kempsville Borough: Arrowhead, Kempsville Meadows and Thalia, and Princess Anne Borough: Court House, also Woodstock in Kempsville.

Scout Gets 1st of Kind

PR. ANNE BOROUGH—David Goeckner, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Goeckner of Pewter Road, last week received the first Boy Scout aviation merit badge in the Tidewater area, according to his grandfather, Cmdr. (Ret.) Charles Mandell.

Goeckner, a member of Boy Scout troop 435 at Plaza Elementary School qualified for the badge through instruction from an uncle in Chicago, who is a commercial pilot.

Mapp and Kierulff, heading the Democratic campaign effort, planned to formally open a headquarters at 8 p.m. on Wednesday of this week on Virginia Beach Boulevard, just east of the Princess Anne Plaza Shopping Center. The Republicans opened a campaign office across the boulevard in the same area earlier.

The lad had been bitten by a copperhead snake in the garage of his Larry Avenue home, resulting in a severe swelling of his hand and forearm.

Using his knowledge of snakes gained through long study, Sgt. Simmons prescribed treatment by phone. Arriving at the Johnson home, he found the boy's father had killed the snake.

Simmons discovered it had consumed a mouse a few hours prior to biting the boy, and this proved to be in favor of the lad. In killing the mouse, the copperhead had used most of its venom, decreasing the danger of infection of the boy's bloodstream.

Simmons told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN that the first 24 to 48 hours are the most important in treatment of a snake bite.

He added that there is no medical record of a copperhead snake bite killing a healthy adult.

Beach Borough Gets Service, Hatchett Says

PR. ANNE BOROUGH—City Manager W. Russell Hatchett, reacting to criticism of city spending in the Beach Borough, said the city government spends more money in that resort borough than it takes out of it, if anything.

J. Malcolm Firth, a resident of that borough, recently wrote in a letter:

"The Beach derives revenue from trains that run on the boardwalk in the summer months, as well as from the umbrella concessions. That money is spent elsewhere, is that fair to the beach proper?"

Hatchett said Firth may not be aware that money from the rubber-tired trains and the beach concessions goes into the city's general fund, from which dollars for recreation and other city operations are appropriated.

Mrs. Ethel B. Sale had a combination birthday and retirement party last Friday given as a surprise by her fellow employees at First & Merchants Bank on Pacific Avenue. When plant materials are transplanted from one spot to another, it is a good idea to cut the top back some. This will compensate for the roots that have been lost or cut in the transplanting operation.

In general, this will increase the chances of the plant's survival.

There are some products on the market that can be sprayed on to prevent dehydration of the plant.

An electric clothes dryer promises you 365 good drying days a year.

How many will the weatherman promise you?

Not a year full of good drying days, for sure. Some are too snowy or too humid or too windy. Or just plain rainy days. With an electric dryer you can dry any day you want, any time day or night. And it'll dry your clothes better, faster, with much less work on your part. That's a promise, too.

Now through November 30 you can save $15.00 on the installation of an electric dryer in your home. Ask your VEPCO-authorized Live Better Electrically dealer how you can qualify.

Experience, Balance in the Courts

Within less than two months, a series of appointments to various court positions of particular interest in greater Virginia Beach have reflected a continuing respect for law and order here and elsewhere in Virginia.

While some may disagree, it is our firm belief that the appointments, involving four levels of judicial action in our nation's system of laws, underscore the value of experience and training for men who serve as jurists.

When ex-Gov. Albert S. Harrison becomes a Justice of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals in a few weeks, he takes with him to the bench a broad background in state statutes and their administration. He was a legislator and attorney general before serving as governor of Virginia from 1962 through 1965, and his legal practice spans decades.

Some may recall that it was while he was attorney general that a number of serious differences arose between the state and federal governments. We recall that he repeatedly counseled a wise course of settling them by legal means in the courts. At this particular time of disagreements between the state and federal levels of government, Mr. Harrison certainly will add to the steady influence of the state's highest court.

Much closer to home were four other court appointments, each position requiring men of different background and experience; and also men of integrity, honesty and fairness.

Judge Richard B. Kellam's move to the U.S. District Court bench for Eastern Virginia on Sept. 1, thus placing him with other prominent jurists, met the requirements.

His appointment also reflects a man's ability to attain prominence in his profession with hard work, fairness and patience. Judge Kellam's presence on the federal bench should help balance the Eastern District court.

A more recent appointment, that of Judge George W. Vakos of Municipal Court to the Virginia Beach Circuit Court (28th Judicial Circuit) bench here, effective last Friday, also provides an element of balance.

Judge Robert S. Wahab and Judge Paul W. Ackiss of that court gained experience through past years as commonwealth's attorneys. Judge Vakos gained his experience through the city's Law Department and Virginia Beach Municipal Court.

His knowledge of municipal laws and their relationships to state statutes will be invaluable to the state court of record in our city, with its unique local government of seven boroughs.

His youth and knowledge of business affairs, his Navy background and his personal ties with many in neighboring Norfolk, as the SUN noted in a recent issue, each speak for themselves.

The elevation of State Del. P.B. White, who did not seek re-election this year, to the full-time Virginia Beach Municipal Court judgeship, after experience as an associate to that court, put on the bench a man familiar with the intent, as well as the wording of bold new laws passed by recent sessions of the General Assembly.

As for the appointment of Frank E. Butler III to succeed White as an associate judge on a part-time basis, this is the first judicial post for Judge Butler. We are confident his selection by the Circuit Court judges was weighed carefully. Mary R. Speight also is an associate judge here.

In summation, all of the appointments are in keeping with the role the various courts play in these difficult times--that of dispensing justice by the flexible rules of law and evidence, and not by personal prejudice.

The same applies to the judges of our other local court--Juvenile & Domestic Relations Court. Judge Philip L. Russo, among those considered for the Circuit Court post, will no doubt continue his concern for our city's children. Miss Speight also serves well as an associate judge in that court because of an interest in our city's youth.

Letters to the Editor

What's His Interest?

Dear Editor:
 As a legal voter and resident of the City of Virginia Beach, I am very interested in the future progress of this city. Consequently, I try to keep myself informed as to who our city officials, councilmen, judges, etc., are.
 I followed the newspapers articles recently when several delegations from Virginia Beach in support of Virginia Beach judges went to Richmond in behalf of their candidates for the office of Circuit Court judge.
 One thing puzzles me, and I hope you may be able to shed some light on my question. When Sen. William Kellam was campaigning for his re-election in the City of Portsmouth, he was given very little, if any support there and accused of "trying to take over Portsmouth." I noticed in one delegation to Richmond, Senator Moody from Portsmouth was a member. What was Senator Moody's interest in the appointment of a Virginia Beach judge? What are his interests in Virginia Beach?
 Eleanor Mills
 (Editor's note: Mr. Moody has not told us. Perhaps Eleanor Mills should ask him.)

Dear Editor:
 Enclosed you will find a very amusing article that I'd like to pass on to you. It was clipped from my hometown newspaper, "The South Boston News."

Or Would There Be?

Car manufacturers in Detroit can do everything humanly and mechanically possible to make a car safe, farmers can mark their machinery with the slow moving vehicle triangles to make them more visible. Any number of other things can be done to aid the driver. But how do you make him "safe"? It's not easy as Franklin and Southampton law enforcement officers will attest.

Rules and regulations can be learned; the simple mechanics of driving can be learned; but responsibility and courtesy can only be found in a mature person. And unfortunately, there are far too few mature people driving automobiles these days.

This is why it is so important to be a defensive driver. The hard fact of the matter is that we must learn to anticipate what the other driver is going to do.

A little practice in this regard will show you just how stupid some drivers really are. The next time you're on the freeway, try to anticipate what the driver ahead of you is thinking. Better yet, try to anticipate what the next three cars ahead of you are going to do. How about the guy in the lane next to you? Will he try to cut into your lane? It's easier to be prepared for unexpected moves than to avoid them at the last second.

Defensive driving isn't easy but with practice it can become second nature to you. And then you'll know you're a good driver.

After all, if everyone were as good drivers as you, there wouldn't be as many accidents as there are. Or would there be?

'Bright' Fall Forecast By W&M Economist

A "bright" fall and pre-Christmas economic picture has been forecast for Virginia by the College of William and Mary's Bureau of Business Research in its current Virginia Business Index.

Dr. Leland E. Traywick, who became Director of the Bureau on September 1, made the observation in reviewing current economic patterns but, at the same time, cautioned that because of "disquiet" in some economic indicators, "the fall season may not be as high as originally anticipated."

Dr. Traywick, an economist who joined the William and Mary Department of Business Administration this fall, formerly was president of the University of Omaha. He succeeded Gilbert C. Jones, now teaching full-time, as Director of the Bureau. The Bureau will become part of the College's new School of Business Administration which will be inaugurated next February 1.

Dr. Traywick reported that of the nine selected business and economic indicators used to chart Virginia trends, building permits "surged ahead substantially" during August, contrasting sharply with a decided decrease the same month of 1966. This past August, he said, found Virginia "in keeping with current national behavior" in housing starts and other construction.

"As one looks over the Virginia data," he said, "one sees much the same sort of pattern that occurred for the nation as a whole in August: Concern over inflation, disquiet about Vietnam, anxiety regarding anticipated strikes in the public and private sectors of the economy, and the range and magnitude of civil disturbances."

For the state at large, there were these percentage changes over August, 1966: Bank debits, down 1.1%; building permits, up 33.1%; electricity consumed, up 14.8%; newspaper advertising lineage, down 1.2%; new car registrations, down 32.3%; non-agricultural employment, up 2.2%; postal receipts, up 3.1%; retail sales, up 0.9% and water consumed, down 5.4%.

CITY STATISTICS

Flying Beer Cans

It seems an editorial on 'Local Option' in last week's SUN upset at least one businessman in the Beach Borough. But since he raised a point on the matter, perhaps some space should be devoted to the brewery-oriented folks in our city of greater Virginia Beach.

There is a theory among some in our community that the sale of cold beer in cans puts a lot of cans as evidence in cars stopped by the police, or by accidents. Another theory is that it causes the cans to fly out of car windows into ditches. We suppose it depends on whether someone likes a hot or cold brew. But maybe cold beer doesn't mix with driving.

Hospitality House Still Needs Site

The Virginia Beach Ministerial Association and a Citizens Committee for the Hospitality House for service men and women have issued a public plea for information on any possible site for next summer in the Beach Borough area.

The Rev. Thomas H. Britton, president of the local ministerial group, said the Citizens Committee approved the ministers looking for a place to locate the service center.

The Hospitality House in the summer of this year operated at a temporary location at 27th Street and Arctic Avenue, where a motel is planned. Britton said the committee is looking for a place to locate the service center.

The daily newspaper in neighboring Norfolk on Monday, Sept. 25, described Seatack as a "Negro, low-income" section and said it "is largely cut off from the area's centers of employment."

The article was on a proposal by Secretary Robert C. Weaver of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to subsidize free or low-fare transit in "ghetto areas" of core cities like Berkeley in Norfolk.

Jimmy Savin, assistant manager of the Delmarva Division of Trailways, said Trailways now has 17 buses going both ways daily through the Seatack area.

"I think there's enough service there," he said. Trailways has routes to and from major employment areas in Virginia Beach as well as to downtown Norfolk, where connections to other employment centers are available.

BUSINESS, INDUSTRY & the PROFESSIONS

City Treasurer V. A. Etheridge recently resigned from the board of Southern Bank of Norfolk, the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN learned early this week.

David G. Walker, bank president, confirmed reports Etheridge is no longer with the bank, but declined to give a reason for the resignation.

Etheridge said any comment would have to come from the bank, which recently opened its second Virginia Beach branch on Princess Anne Road near Parliament Drive in Kempesville Borough.

She and her husband, Karl, live on N. Alanton Drive in Lynnhaven Borough. She was an unsuccessful Republican candidate for Virginia Beach City Council in 1966.

Beach P.O. Receipts Top $1 Million Yearly

BEACH BOROUGH—Postal receipts in the Virginia Beach system were 21 per cent higher for a recent 28-day period, and not for a full year as reported in a Norfolk newspaper, Postmaster Joseph T. Crosswhite Jr. said.

He said receipts totaled $83,207.35 for the 28 days ending Sept. 23, and this was 21 per cent higher than during the comparable period in 1966.

Crosswhite also said a proposal of Rep. Thomas N. Downing to work out a long-range plan for a federal office building in Virginia Beach fits in with the local system's growth in recent years.

Beach Men Probe Ocean Depths

Two Virginia Beach men, Dr. Wyman Harrison and oceanographer Bruce Grant, are playing key roles in research which could lead to future mining of the Atlantic ocean on the northern Blake Plateau, a submerged area about 75 to 120 miles off the coasts of Georgia, South Carolina and Florida.

Harrison heads the Land and Sea Interaction Laboratory of the Environmental Science Services Administration's Institute for Oceanography in neighboring Norfolk. Grant is an oceanographer who is chief scientist for an expedition the USC&GSS Discoverer began early this week when it left Norfolk.

The Discoverer, commanded by Capt. Lorne G. Taylor, is making a 15 to 20 day survey of the Blake Plateau to photograph and collect manganese nodules in deposits there. Grant, who has studied such deposits in Antarctic seas, said those on the Blake Plateau contain principally manganese, nickel, iron, cobalt and copper, in varying quantities.

He said, "The schedule calls for dredges and deep-sea photography at 62 different locations on the Blake Plateau. In addition, bottom water samples will be taken to determine possible chemical interactions with the sea floor."

The survey is a small part of ESSA's program to explore and map the Continental Shelf, the vast area of some 800,000 square miles which lies off the coasts of the United States. The Discoverer will return to its Miami, Fla., base when the survey ends.

During the finalizing of plans for the new justice of the peace system in Virginia Beach, various JP's voiced their sentiments on the program. Alvin Rodgers said, "The system will without a doubt be greatly improved as far as the public is concerned, through the availability of a JP around the clock."

Regarding the assigning of them for specific shifts of duty, Rodgers, with a chuckle in his voice said, "It sure will be nice to have a little time to sleep by knowing when you're not on duty."

Young Ricky Dorcy heard a burglar alarm going off at a shop in the Aragona Shopping Center one morning. Ricky also observed a car leaving the scene at the same time.

Placing a phone call to police headquarters he told of what happened along with a description of the car, enabling police to stop the auto a few moments later. Investigation showed the alarm was triggered by weather and nothing was amiss in the shop. Moore said Ricky's alertness would have been of great value in the event of an actual burglarizing of the shop.

Stage Door Theatre Produces 'Best Yet'

The cast of the musical spoof, "How To Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," has turned in an acceptable job in the current production on display at Stage Door Dinner Play house. The Pulitzer Prize winning book has a great number of funny lines and some very pleasant music.

The thread of plot deals with the meteoric rise of an ex-window washer from the very bottom of a large company to chairman of the board... all in a remarkably short time. The play takes some mighty large pokes at the inner workings of big business, but it is all in fun. The fun is built in, and therein lies the problem. It is funny enough and enough of a spoof without adding a lot of little "cute" bits and playing up the innuendo. But director Jon Dawson has seen fit to caricature many of his characters until they seem to cease being funny and become almost ludicrous.

On the other hand, musical director Bruce Roberts and choreographer Jean Wallace put together some excellent voices and beautiful movement to give real body to the musical numbers, especially the large production numbers.

Weldon Smith's portrayal of the window washer on his way up is pleasing, if slightly overdone. Jan Ewing, who also designs the sets, really overdoes the role of the boss' nephew. Although he is an audience favorite, his effeminate gestures and actions could have been toned down somewhat.

Sharon Roberts does a nice job as the young man's long suffering girlfriend, and her voice is extremely pleasing. Nice funny characterizations are also turned in by Arnyce Anders, Bill Covington and Ingrid Holland.

In the role of the sexpot, Hedy, Pamela Pine does a nice job, but her "motor" was running too much of the time.

Toby Stephens as the president of the company is at his best and does a marvelous job. This production is by far the best so far at the new theatre, but is still not quite a finished overall production. JOSEPH LOWENTHAL, JR.

Happenings in MALLORCA

By Jeanne Magee Tucker
Women's Editor

MALLORCA, SPAIN--Mallorca (pronounced My-Yorka) is a bustling, Spanish center where the good life is lived each day from about noon until dawn.

Any resemblance between Mallorca and Old Spain is purely coincidental. Here, instead of paella (a Spanish dish made with corn meal) is pizza, and the only donkeys are those pulling carriages full of tourists.

Everything is Now, Now, Now.
It is a booming Mediterranean.

kissed tourist haven--its shoreline dotted with plush Now hotels, its harbor filled with gleaming luxury yachts.

Looking down on it all, though, like a majestic old matriarch is Mallorca's centuries-old cathedral towering well above all the New Now buildings, a reminder to Mallorcans and visitors alike that the Now things were not always so--that life was not always so beautiful. In years past, this Spanish Island has known strife and conquest: invasions of an entirely different nature. C'est la vie.

Today she knows that here in Mallorca is the sought-after status, the blue waters and balmy breeze that bring about a pleasant lucrative invasion of fun-seekers from all over the world.

She becomes a home away from home for the rich, the adventuresome--the play people of the world.

The Mallorcan hotels and clubs cater to their whims, providing fantasy-like settings, where players can bask in the sun, sipping Compari, dance all night, swim in the Mediterranean at daybreak--all day every day and all night every night.

T.H. Rose Takes Bride

BEACH BOROUGH--Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hadley Rose were united in marriage in ceremonies Sept. 9 at the United Church of Christ in Woodstock, Va. Mrs. Rose is the former Miss Patricia Jane Sullivan, daughter of Mrs. Jane Sullivan of Woodstock and L.W. Sullivan Sr. of Washington, D.C. Mr. Rose is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H.T. Rose of Virginia Beach.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor-length gown of white silk organza over peau de soie with short sleeves of Alencon lace with Alencon lace trim on the front and train. Her headpiece was a shoulder length French illusion veil attached to a triple-layered bow of white organza over peau de soie. Her bridal bouquet was of daisies and white roses, centered with a single white gardenia.

Following the ceremony, the couple left on a wedding trip to Puerto Rico and St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands. They are now living on 22nd Street.

Balmung (bal-mung) was Siegfried's sword which slew the dragon Fafnir, guardian of the Nibelung treasure. After killing the dragon, Siegfried bathed in its blood, becoming invulnerable except where a hidden leaf stuck to his back. His eventual murderer found this spot.

BALMUNG a blade without peer recreated by GERBER LEGENDARY BLADES

Legend is interesting, but let us tell you a true story of sham blades and superb craftsmanship. Gerber Blades take a tip from legend's master smiths; each knife is handmade, hand finished of the finest steel ever used in cutlery. This steel is a special blend of costly alloys—tungsten, molybdenum, vanadium, chromium and carbon—giving the blade extra hardness with shock-tested flexibility. The blade edge is wedge ground and honed to razor sharpness. It stays sharper longer and cuts with effortless ease. The flat-free, surprised finish stays bright... won't stain or tarnish, ever! You'll treasure this modern cutler, made to last a lifetime and matched only in legend.

WOMEN Women Spend INVESTORS the Money

Mrs. McClane is associated with a stock brokerage firm here, a member firm of the New York Stock Exchange.

(Fifth of a Series)

Women spend 80 per cent of the money in the country--some husbands would swear it is closer to 99 44/100 per cent! Years of practice have made women look carefully at what they buy. When a woman purchases a security, what is she buying?

There are a number of kinds of securities available to the investor. The three most popular are bonds, common stocks and preferred stocks.

Bonds are nothing more or less than debt owed by a government or corporation. A bond is a debt to be repaid within a certain time and paying interest at fixed intervals. The familiar U.S. Savings Bond indicates that the government owes you money and agrees to repay you with interest. Bonds are suitable for the investor who wants a fixed return on his money with maximum safety.

Common stock is the most discussed type of security and the most popular. A share of common stock represents actual ownership of a share of a company. As an owner, the common stock holder generally exercises the greatest management control through the right to vote but has last claim on the company's earnings.

Since there are about 30,000 actively traded common stocks, there is no other form of security that offers as many variations in safety, growth, income possibilities and liquidity. There is no limit to the possible return or growth in value of the common stock--but, there is no guarantee that there will be any return at all. For the investor who is willing to accept some risk, common stocks can bring great financial rewards.

Preferred stocks are something else again. They also indicate ownership of the corporation. In simplest form, the preferred stock is one that requires the payment of a specified dividend before any dividend can be paid the common stock. The dividend is usually paid at a fixed rate. Participating, cumulative and convertible preferred stocks offer the investor interesting privileges which are well worth studying.

Bonds and preferred stocks offer the investor, in most cases, limited growth possibilities and a set income. Such income is susceptible to loss through inflation. As a rule, carefully selected common stocks give the purchaser a better opportunity to combat this loss with increased value and increasing income.

October: Goblins, Apples

October is upon us again and there's no better time than Halloween to recall some of the superstitions surrounding the apple. In many places apples are believed to be capable of telling love-fortunes. A spiral of apple peeling thrown over the shoulder of an unmarried peeler supposedly will form the initial of her future husband. Slice an apple in two; count the seeds in each half. If they are even, a marriage will follow; if one of the seeds should have been cut in two, the course of love will not be smooth.

What is not superstition is that apples are one of the most versatile of fruits. Recipes for apple desserts are legion--apple cakes, pies, brown Betty, pandowdy, turnovers. Apple jelly and apple butter, candied apples and baked apples are well loved old-fashioned sweets. Apple sauces, relishes and chutneys are favorite accompaniments for meat, poultry and game. Apples go with vegetables such as sweet potatoes, sauerkraut and carrots.

While there are some 7,000 named varieties of apples, 91 percent of those for the fruit bowl are fall and winter apples which are listed here in the order of quantity produced: Delicious; McIntosh; Golden Delicious; Rome; Jonathan; Winesap; York; Stayman; Yellow Newtown; Cortland; R.I. Greening; Northern Spy.

When shopping look for firm, crisp, bright, clean, well-colored apples. Flavor is a variety characteristic which is also greatly influenced by the stage of maturity at which the fruit is picked and the conditions under which it is kept. Apples that are well-colored for their variety usually have the full flavor of the particular variety, provided firmness and crispness of the flesh has not been impaired.

Another old belief about apples is that eating them will produce long life; in Persia, for example the apple is the fruit of immortality. Apples are a good nutritional source. They contain a variety of vitamins and minerals although are not outstanding for any one. They are low-calorie, low sodium, alkaline in reaction, and are excellent for the teeth

Sticky Sweetness Tempts Tots

Women's editor Jeanne Magee Tucker is on vacation. Staff writer Carolyn McAllen pinch-hits for her again this week.

One of the most poignant scenes we noted at the Virginia Beach Fair last week was a family group consisting of a mother and four children, the oldest of which didn't look over five.

The mother, obviously intending a treat for the kids, bought a round of cotton candy. The oldest girl, apparently remembering eating it before, bit right into it.

The next oldest, a boy, tentatively touched it with the tip of his tongue and decided it was good, so then went at it with hand and mouth.

The younger boy, about two, shook his head at first and clamped his lips together tightly as her mother offered him the goodie. He finally accepted a small piece, then wanted more.

The baby, a girl about a year old, would have no part of it. She turned her head away. Then she puckered up her face and cried as her mother caught her head and forced a bit into her mouth. Oh, the look of wonderment on her face when she finally got a taste of the sweet, sticky stuff.

But the poor mother! There's nothing like four sticky sets of hands to try to wash before they put them on something--and somehow they always do.

At least the fair got a good break on weather this year to help make up for last year's morass of mud. And the oyster shells were a definite improvement.

Why is it that the younger the child, the wilder the midway rides they want to get on? The kids usually come off smiling, followed by their weak-kneed green-faced parents.

P.S. Welcome home Jeanne Magee Tucker.

They've Got Beady Eyes . . .

It's the season for beads and baubles... even for the do-it-yourselfers who have found at least one local fabric shop well stocked with glitter by the yard...costly but tempting.

Rows and rows of beads that glitter, beads that sparkle, beads that color and beads that border are available at notions counters for a price. While the price at first thought might appear to be staggering, a second thought may prove that a yard or two of beading might well save a costly but outdated dress, to say nothing of the couturier touch it might add to the simple little hand-sewn one you've just put together.

Center, Gino Charles cut a simple A-line dress out of men's gray tissue flannel then added a glittering jeweled collar for drama.

Right, another Gino Charles creation, this one in crepe with the sleeves and the seductively scooped neckline banded in crystal and sequin beading.

Can You Fill a Bag?

Will you have a few extra hours in the next week to help servicemen and servicewomen in South Vietnam have a happier Christmas?

If so, contact the Virginia Beach branch of the American National Red Cross at 318 19th St. They have 1,500 Christmas gift bags to fill by Oct. 10.

The Red Cross purchased the material for the bags, and volunteers made them. Now help is needed in filling them.

If it is impractical to actually purchase the gift items and fill the bags, volunteers may send a check covering the cost of the items for the number of bags they wish to sponsor, and the Red Cross will make bulk purchases and fill the bags. A holiday greeting card identifying the Red Cross chapter and the cooperating group providing the gifts will be placed in each bag.

A complete list of suggested items is available from the Red Cross. Among the items are ball point pens, paperback books, plastic soap cases, plastic toothbrush holder, nail clippers, plastic cigarette case, comb, pocket games, small tins of nuts or candies (vacuum packed only), windproof type cigarette lighters (no lighter fluid), small kitchen size plastic bags, "Wipe and Shine" packet shoe polish, moistened paper washcloths (individually wrapped) and other gift items.

Mutual Federal doesn't say "yes" to every loan application. Maybe we don't say "yes" quite as often as some others. But the fact is, when we do say "yes," it's a good loan. Good for the borrower. Good for the shareholders whose money is entrusted to our care. As a result of these policies we haven't had to change our way of doing business with every change in economic conditions. Brady: 'Supreme Performance' Needed

The Trucker player wasn't acting like a referee last Friday. He just missed the football which Princess Anne's Tom Counter caught. The pass from Bob German set up a John Kiefer touchdown in the Cavalier's 27 to 20 win over Churchland. (Ingram Photo)

The Cavalier defense last Friday was "good enough," as Coach John Brady had told the SUN, to shake up Churchland and give Princess Anne offense opportunities to score four touchdowns in the 27 to 20 win.

Against Norview's Pilots of Norfolk this Friday at Norview, Brady figures it will take "a supreme performance" and a "good, outstanding overall game" by both the offense and defense against the tough opponent.

Ed Love and Paul Ziegler were outstanding at defense last week along with dependable Steve Sakis, Young Richard Byrd playing well at fullback, when giving John Kiefer rest time. Quarterback Bob German, and ends Tom Counter and Bruce Runyon added to the score as both offense and defense clicked like a championship team.

Knights After Indians
Coach Charlie Caldwell's Kellam High Knights, confident after last Friday's 28 to 0 win over Bayside's Marlins, venture to Great Bridge in Chesapeake this Friday at 8 p.m., this Friday to play Indian River High. (Indian River plays its home games at Great Bridge.)

"I think it's going to be a real tough football game," Caldwell said as his Knights look for a third season victory. Defensive ends Dooley Blizell and David Trax are among those playing top ball, and the entire team has improved with each game, Caldwell said. Quarterbacks Mike Futrell and Bob Carson are both passing well.

Marlins Fight Hornets
Coach George Versprille of Bayside High, where the Marlins have had injury troubles, meet the Deep Creek Hornets from Chesapeake this Friday at Bayside's new stadium in Bayside Borough.

Versprille said, "It's just going to take a good combination of both the offense and defense" against the Hornets. The defense looked good against Kellam last week, he added.

Injuries to Ray Emerson and Jackie Boone hurt Bayside's offensive team, but Jim Myers (upback on offense and line backer on defense) and Joe Daverso (offensive tackle and defensive guard) both looked good. Paul Elswick is tough at center, and Butch Gardner is an improving quarterback.

Falcons vs. Patriots
The only intra-city football game this Friday is a north-south scrap within Lynnhaven Borough, where the winless Cox Falcons play the First Colonial Patriots. Although it is a home game for the Patriots, they will play at Cox High's stadium.

The Cox ground game looked improved against Great Bridge, whose pass defense last Friday figured in the Falcons' 33 to 6 loss. Coach George McGovern is making adjustments.

First Colonial's Patriots, who won easily over Norfolk's new Lake Taylor team behind Les Whitehorse last Saturday night, have a pair of top defensive players in guard Jimbo Kitchin and Winslow Stillman, according to coach Frank Webster.

Tigers Win Again
Joshua Darden's Union Kempsville Tigers, who played fair

Bill Dailey (84) and Mike Brown (30) kept Bayside players at bay for Mike Futrell (12) on this 10-yard pass as the Knights beat the Marlins 28 to 0 last Friday. Bob Carson, with the same protection, passed to Mike Tucker for one score, and Carson, Futrell and Steve Hines ran for touchdowns. (Becker Photo)

Toll Road Will Be Virginia 44

It won't be Highway 40, or Highway 54, but it will be Virginia Highway 44 when the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway opens across greater Virginia Beach in December.

Four contractors on the 12.1-mile route—E. V. Williams Co., Inc., Ames & Webb, Higginson-Buchanan, Inc., and Dickerson & N. C., Inc., have been putting down yards of steel, miles of concrete and asphalt and tons of dirt about two years ago.

The four-lane, divided expressway with strictly-controlled access may cut down the accident toll on Virginia Beach Boulevard, becoming a major shopping street along Beach Boulevard, which is becoming a major shopping street along its full length here.

E. H. Orange, toll facilities manager for the state, recently released a brochure describing the expressway as "The fastest and safest route between Norfolk and Virginia Beach," referring to the Beach Borough's oceanfront.

When the highway is completed, it will have two 12-foot-wide lanes for traffic going east, and the same for traffic going west. The project construction cost is estimated at $29.8 million. (This does not include extra bonds sold, when the state financed the facility, to cover interest and principal payments the first few years.

The expressway will have a speed limit of 65 miles per hour with no traffic lights or crossings, paved shoulders, sweeping curves, and connections with interstate highways on the west and Atlantic Avenue and Booth Boulevard on the east.

This Week's Newsmakers

Capt. Earl P. Yates

.... a resident of 88th street in Lynnhaven Borough who has been named protective commanding officer for the Navy's aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy, being built at Newport News.

V.A. Etheridge

.... Virginia Beach city treasurer who reportedly proposes to study the idea of Virginia cities levying a local "income tax," a suggestion debated in past years among state government leaders.

Mrs. Florence Kramer

.... Bow Creek golfer who putted her way to the Women's Tidewater Golf Association championship last week by scoring a 4 and 3 win over Mrs. Elizabeth Davis of Cavalier. Mary Helen Rawls was consolation winner.

Thomas F. Maxwell

.... city manager of neighboring Norfolk, where some local people have investments, proposed an increase in that city's real estate assessment ratio to try and solve debt problems. Whether the high tax rates in Norfolk would be lowered proportionately is not clear. (Welfare spending in Norfolk in two years increased nearly 80 per cent to $9.7 million.)

Walter G. Ayers

.... new director of public affairs for the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation, which has members in greater Virginia Beach.

How About It?

The 1968 Virginia General Assembly is expected to consider legislation proposed to give voters in each city and county the right to decide whether they want whiskey sold by the drink, under specific controls, within their own community.

Since the question has been debated in greater Virginia Beach's seven boroughs for years, the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN this week begins a "straw poll" on the question. Clip the coupon below, write "yes" or "no" and mail as directed. One per reader, please, with signatures optional.

Should voters in each community have the right to decide how whiskey is sold within their community?

City Is $14.9 Million

Below Debt Limit

An audit of the Virginia Beach city government's books for the fiscal year which ended on June 30 indicated the city is about $14.9 million below its legal debt margin, based on real estate assessed values.

The audit, prepared by A. Lee Rawlings & Company, certified public accountants, listed outstanding debts at $27.5 million, including state literary fund loans and various bond issues over the years.

State law, which allows a city to borrow up to 18 per cent of the amount of assessed values of real estate, puts the Virginia Beach limit at $42.5, according to the audit report.

This leaves the city a margin of $14.9 million in borrowing ability. The debt ceiling fixed by state law actually changes each year with suburban growth here.

Future Bond Referendum Talked for City Schools

PR. ANNE BOROUGH--The City School Board may decide next Tuesday how large a school bond referendum it wants in the immediate future for a public school construction program to meet needs through the year 1969.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN learned that the school board's building committee recently met with City Council to give councilmen some idea of school needs.

Included in any future bond referendum would be the planned vocational school and a new concept high school mentioned in earlier issues of the SUN.

Being considered in the building program by school officials are proposed additions to two high schools--Kempsville and First Colonial; as well as a number of elementary school additions in Lynnhaven, Bayside and Kempsville boroughs.

There had been unconfirmed reports by SUN deadline that total school financing involved for those and other proposed schools would exceed $14 million.

A site for the new concept high school already has been chosen in the Princess Anne Plaza area of Lynnhaven Borough, and one informed source said new secondary schools will be needed by 1969 in Kempsville Borough and Bayside Borough.

The City School Board, with permission from City Council, earlier built stadiums at Bayside and First Colonial High Schools with the understanding a bond issue would be needed to finance them.

While the school board determines school construction needs, City Council has to order Circuit Court to order a bond referendum at a specific date, in order for schools to be

Beach Outgrew Predictions of The Mayor, City Manager

Mayor Frank A. Dusch and City Manager W. Russell Hatchett 10 years ago looked into their "crystal balls" and tried to figure out what the future held for what was then a two-square-mile city called Virginia Beach.

The letters were among an estimated 100 placed in a "time capsule" at a branch of what is now Virginia National Bank. At the time, it was a branch of National Bank of Commerce. Hatchett and Dusch had the letters returned to them earlier this month when the "time capsule" was opened at the bank. Other letters were mailed to persons, some going to families of deceased persons.

Both of the letters were dated May 23, 1957. And since then a lot of changes have occurred, including the formation of present Virginia Beach through a merger with former Princess Anne County.

Dusch described Virginia Beach as a "lovely place and its problems and our plans for its future have presented a challenge."

"I am sure that the Conventual Hall, which is being constructed this year, will have added greatly to the economy of the city and its use by now is undoubtedly varied," the mayor said in reference to the Virginia Beach Civic Center.

"If the city has obtained the rights for cocktail lounges, then you are able to compete with any resort on the coast and I am sure the completion of the north-south bridge tunnel to Cape Charles has great meaning for the tourist trade."

Ten years later, the cocktail lounge matter is unsettled, but the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel was built and now carries tourists to the city.

Dusch also guessed on the completion of an "ocean highway" in his letter 10 years ago. Much of it has developed, but there is a missing link between Oceana Boulevard and North Carolina. The city government has plans to extend a highway south of Sandbridge as part of the coastal route.

City Manager Hatchett's letter of 10 years ago said he was "hoping that the program of replenishing the beach has continued and that by now suitable jetties have been built to the south of Virginia Beach (now Beach Borough) and Rudee Inlet" for a channel to a marina for fishing craft. (The jetties are being built today.)

"It is my hope that you have by now developed a water supply in conjunction with the drainage of the southern part of the county (formerly Princess Anne County), and that a reservoir of water in the Owl Creek area is furnishing ample water for the city and the surrounding area, providing, of course, that the tests and research have not made the use of sea water economically sound," Hatchett wrote 10 years ago.

Virginia Beach now buys its water in bulk from Norfolk for the Beach Borough, and has Norfolk serving water to other sections.

Hatchett also wrote 10 years ago that the city's population would be 35,000, somewhat below the 160,000 today.

He also said in the 1957 letter, addressed at the time to today's city manager, actually himself:

"Of one thing I am sure, that you, like myself, enjoy meeting the challenge presented by the problems of a city such as Virginia Beach as they are unique in that we must maintain a separate identity from the City of Norfolk and yet work together for the common good of the entire area, keeping in mind at all time that the City of Virginia Beach is the seashore vacation spot for all Virginia and for vacationists everywhere."

The present Virginia Beach, with its 250-plus square miles, has its separate identity, and its officials are stressing cooperation with Norfolk.

Rudee Inlet Construction Progresses

BEACH BOROUGH--The contractor for the Rudee Inlet jetty project expects to complete a trestle for construction equipment to move onto the south jetty by the end of this month, according to a report received by City Council.

L. Dean Curtis, city industrial development director and supervisor of the inlet project near the south end of the oceanfront boardwalk in the Beach Borough, also gave this schedule on other phases of the project:

Finish putting riprap at the end of the trestle for the south jetty, which will be built of stone at the end of a sand trap system, by Dec. 15.

Finish work on the north jetty of stone by Jan. 15, 1968. Complete sheet piling on the groin for the sand trap by Jan. 1.

Finish the jetty construction project by Jan. 31 of next year. Channel dredging also is planned to open the inlet to sports fishing boats.

W.F. Magann is main contractor on the job, and stone is being provided by the Superior Stone Company.

At the same time, one school official said, the number of students in elementary schools indicates more junior and senior high schools are needed.

completed in time for classes in September of 1968, planning work would have to begin early next year, or sooner.

A proposed vocational-technical center for the city would involve a certain amount of federal and state financial aid.

Public school enrollment in greater Virginia Beach's 40 schools currently is in excess of 38,000, and continuing suburban growth is expected to increase enrollment more the next two years.

Downing: New Ships 'Bolster' Manpower

First District Rep. Thomas N. Downing, whose district includes Virginia Beach as well as the Newport News and Hampton areas, was in Honolulu this week to speak at an American Merchant Marine Conference.

Downing, in the text of a speech released before he left for the conference, estimated that "within the next two years, by far the greater part of the North Atlantic trade" will be dominated by "container ship."

The Congressman also said the nation's merchant marine again will be confronted with a manpower dilemma, "but it will be caused by a surplus, rather than a shortage of manpower."

He said that what has happened to the American Flag merchant marine since World War II is "past history," and the country now has a maritime program.

Downing, who is on the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, spoke to the conference about 4 p.m. Wednesday.

The American Merchant Marine Conference was held in conjunction with the 1967 convention of the Propeller Club of the United States in Honolulu.

In the text of his speech, he said the nation's new maritime program "will bolster our manpower situation," and enable the country to retire "some of those valiant old rust buckets before they sink."

"I know of few things which will excite the interest of anyone to any profession like new equipment," he said.

Aug. Bond Sales Reach $32,977

Series "E" U. S. Savings Bonds sales in greater Virginia Beach totaled $32,977 in August, according to E. V. Slattum, chairman.

Total Virginia Beach sales for the year have been $307,520 or 60 per cent of the $510,000 goal for 1967.

'Status Board' Helps Beach Police Service

They call it a "status board," and it will enable the Virginia Beach Police Division to pinpoint where a car in any of the divisions is at a given moment, not who stands where on the status ladder of social life.

The "status board" is the "heart" of a new Communications Control Center readied for operation this week in the radio room of police headquarters at Princess Anne Court House in Princess Anne Borough.

The Motorola Radio Corporation was the manufacturer and supplier, and Tidewater Electronics installed the new communications equipment.

It features a map of the city broken down into areas and showing which of the city's seven boroughs is covered by each of the three precinct operations in greater Virginia Beach.

The map also contains a numerical code, designating which police units (or vehicles) are connected with the various bureaus of the division, such as the traffic, detective or juvenile bureaus.

A series of lights on the board indicates which cars are in service at a given moment, and whether a particular car is on assignment in a specific part of its district where it may be needed.

When any unit is assigned and has arrived at its destination, a record card containing information on a citizen's complaint is inserted into a control panel slot opposite the nearest unit's corresponding code number. This blackens that light on the "status board," indicating men in that car are working on that complaint.

Another feature of the Communications Control Center is a "confidential circuit." By means of this radio circuit, men assigned to a specific case, requiring communication between only certain police units, can communicate with each other without being overheard by or disturbing other units.

There also are now two dispatcher positions in the communications center for the Police Division, allowing for more rapid handling of complaints received by phone, as well as more assistance for police units anywhere in the city's seven boroughs.

The new communications center is under the direction of Capt. H.C. Terry, who recently became its first Precinct commanding officer when Capt. R.H. Stone retired.

Terry told the SUN the center "will be a big advantage to us. It will allow us to be of more service to the people by a more efficient dispatching of cars to investigate complaints."

'Ambassadors' Promote Safety

LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH--A Safety Ambassador program for teen-age drivers is being extended to greater Virginia Beach this year.

The program, started by Jack R. Wilkins, of Wilkins Chevrolet, in Norfolk and Chesapeake several years ago, involves giving high school seniors new model cars to drive for a year. They are required to observe all rules of the road, passenger-load limitations and keep seat belts buckled at all times, as well as follow other safety rules.

Plans for this year's program began last spring, when 11 high school juniors in Chesapeake, Norfolk and Virginia Beach were chosen as ambassadors for this school year. Curtis Kemp and Terre Ittner, seniors at Cox High, will be the first Virginia Beach ambassadors.

Ambassadors of other schools are Tommy Rhodes and Sally Wade of Great Bridge; John Howton and Debbie Tugwell of Norview; Christine Petersen and Steve Tonelson of Maury; Leigh Turpin of Granby; Kenny Morgan and Ellen Rountrey of Oscar Smith.

Since Wilkins started the ambassador program, it has been picked up for use in Galveston, Tex., and at a college in California.

Borrow Pit, Motel Permits Approved

PR. ANNE BOROUGH--Use permits for a borrow pit in the southern part of Kempsville Borough and a 52-unit motel at 9th Street and Pacific Avenue in the Beach Borough are among those approved by City Council early this week.

Council approved a City Planning Commission recommendation that the borrow pit, planned by Lakeside Development Corporation south of Indian River Road near Kempsville Road, be completed in 12 months, and that the city's ordinance on excavations be observed.

The use permit approved for construction of a 52-unit motel was requested by Harold W. James for the northeast corner of 9th Street and Pacific Avenue. Council voted to require 80 percent of parking for cars to be on the site.

Council voted to deny zoning changes requested corners of Caren Drive and Virginia Beach Boulevard, after hearing from residents of the area who opposed it.

Council approved the following applications:

One from Myrtice W. Marrow for permission to construct a gasoline supply station on the northeast corner of First Colonial Road and Great Neck Road.

One filed by Sacks, Sacks and Kendall, attorneys, for rezoning land to limited commercial use at Virginia Beach Boulevard near Garrett Drive.

One from Newtown Road Corporation and Bayside Capitol Corporation for rezoning land west of Newtown Road and south of Baker Road in Bayside Borough for limited commercial use.

One from Hassel E. Perrell for rezoning land east of Independence Boulevard and north of Wishart Road from rural-residence to general commercial use.

Fire Drills Protect U.S. Mails at Beach

This is National Fire Prevention Week, and the Virginia Beach postal system has joined firemen and others in the city in taking preventive measures.

Joseph T. Crosswhite Jr.,

city postmaster, said proper emergency fire equipment in the stations here, and drills being conducted for employees emphasize how far the post office goes to protect the U.S. mails.

In advance of instantly-called fire drills, Milton T. Holland, chief city fire inspector, visited postal stations to check the readiness of equipment.

Each of the 18 work locations for postal employees, scattered about the city's seven boroughs, has its own fire-fighting brigades and a fire preventing work-force. Their job is to either extinguish, or contain a fire until local firemen arrive on the scene.

During the preceding two years, the Virginia Beach postal system has not had a fire, a spokesman said.

Whimsical lion

Mrs. Meyer and Suzi look at one Suzi's favorite illustrations.

Suzi Likes Animals

BEACH BOROUGH--Suzi is 20, has had no formal art training beyond high school and may be on the threshold of a career in illustrating children's books.

Her whole name is Suzi Dean, but her illustrations are signed with just her first name.

Her whimsical pastels of animals and children attracted the attention of a publisher, representative recently when he came into the Virginia Beach Book Shop in the Chamber of Commerce Building at 25th Street and Pacific Avenue where she works.

He was so impressed he bought three for himself, then recommended that she contact his publishing company.

"Her illustrations are natural for children's books," said Mrs. Sylvia Carpenter Meyer, the shop owner, who ought to know. Before opening her shop last March she worked in a jobbing shop which supplied books for school libraries.

Perhaps this experience influenced the large number and variety of children's books in her shop.

Suzi has been working in the shop several months and doing pastels and oil paintings in her free time. She has displayed her work in the Boardwalk Art Show and the Janaf Art Show locally.

The book store, which has a homey atmosphere with carpeting and a fireplace, also contains paintings by Ved, who is known in the Beach area for her portraits. The shop has almost every imaginable category of book. "If we don't have it we'll order it," said Mrs. Meyer with a smile.

Tickets Are on Sale For Ball

Tickets are on sale for the Bicentennial Ball Oct. 27 at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard in Portsmouth, Va., and a number of Virginia Beach residents are planning to attend.

The first 10 tickets, at $5 each, recently were sold to Rear Adm. James A. Brown, shipyard commander, John E. Fay, general chairman, said 100 seats at 10 tables were temporarily reserved for sales to the 180 members of the Bicentennial Committee. It includes shipyard employees and community leaders throughout greater Virginia Beach and other cities.

The ball, scheduled from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the shipyard's Scott Center Auditorium, will feature the music of the Glen Miller Orchestra, under the direction of Buddy DeFranco. The auditorium will accommodate 375 couples—750 persons.

"All seats will be reserved," Fay said. "However, he added, 'they will be sold throughout Tidewater on a first-come, first-served basis, except for the 10 seats temporarily earmarked for committee members.'"

The ball will be held just four days before the yard's actual 200th birthday. The date on the deed to the original 16 acres of shipyard land is Nov. 1, 1767. The anniversary dance will be one of concluding highlights of the shipyard's year-long bicentennial celebration.

VBDC Schedules Oct. 18 Meet

LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH--The Virginia Beach Development Council, headed by E. R. Cockrell Jr., has announced a meeting for 6:30 p.m. Oct. 18 at the Bay Harbour Club on Laskin Road.

Cockrell said the dinner meeting will be attended by members of the City Council and of the city's manager's office.

Friday's the Date For Junior Miss

BAYSIDE BOROUGH--High School girls in greater Virginia Beach have until this Friday, Oct. 13, to return applications if they plan to compete for the title of Junior Miss in a local contest sponsored by the Bayside-Princess Anne Jaycees.

The top local prize is a $300 scholarship, and the winner of the Virginia Beach contest will be among 26 competing for the state title, National competition will be in Mobile, Ala., next March.

Besides the $300 scholarship offered by the Jaycees, the runner-up will receive a $100 scholarship from R.K. Chevrolet, and the Jaycees have a $50 prize for second runner-up.

A spokesman for the Jaycee group, one of two in greater Virginia Beach, said girls planning to enter the contest should have their applications returned to high school counselors or Linwood Benton by Friday night.

Interviews will be held in early November by judges, and 16 finalists will be selected. A number of local businesses are providing gifts for the winner of the Junior Miss title and other awards.

Beach Police Used As Story 'Model'

BEACH BOROUGH--The city of Virginia Beach's program of employing law students to work as summer policemen in the boardwalk resort area here is winning more attention.

Among Beach churches
First Colonial Baptist Church (Southern) on First Colonial Road in Lynnhaven Borough is among the fast-growing churches in Virginia Beach. The congregation moved into the building in June, 1963. The Rev. George T. Stallings is minister.

Happy faces

The Virginia Beach Kiwanis Club recently took more than 300 children to Oceana Naval Air Station for a tour of the base, lunch and a band concert on "Kids Day" which is held annually by Kiwanis Clubs throughout the nation. In charge of the program were Tom Follary, Joe Lagiglia, Tom J. Howard Jr. and Diedrich Oglesbee. Shown here, surrounded by some of the kids, are Lt. (j.g.) V.P. Reynolds, left, and Follary.

BADGES & BANTER

By Les Lehigh
Personnel of the records room in police headquarters at Princess Anne Court House were no different from other sport fans on the opening day of the world series, going about their work routine with one ear tuned to a radio.

It was the top of the second inning, the "Cardinals" were up. As the batter squared off, waiting for the pitch, a power failure plunged police headquarters here into momentary darkness. As the radio faded, a small voice of dismay, undoubtedly that of a "Red Sox" fan, was heard saying, "I bet he hit a home run."

A "Junior Fire Patrol" has been organized on Knotts Island, at the Virginia Beach-North Carolina line.

Fire Chief George Sauer says the aim of the program is "to utilize as many school children as possible to act as fire spotters and to make every child conscious of fire prevention. Boys and girls aged 8 to 14 have been invited to join the "Patrol".

Men of the Ocean Park volunteer fire and rescue unit in Bayside Borough will be donning chef's hats this coming Saturday for a fish fry with all the trimmings.

Perhaps the work load around the Beach Borough Shore Patrol station is catching up with Bruce Martin, a first class petty officer. The supervisor of work details, glancing at a table top which Martin had not found time to have repaired, said: "I guess I'll have to get the Coast Guard to work on it."

Clouds of dust rising around the 2nd Police Precinct on Arctic Avenue are from construction of a new "lock up". Comprised of four cells and a "bull pen", the "lock up" will be used for temporarily housing adult law offenders until they can be transferred to city jail, or bonded.

While students in schools and colleges continue their pursuit of knowledge, classes also are in session for new policemen in greater Virginia Beach. Seventeen men who recently joined the division are attending a recruit police training school, which will continue through Oct. 23.

Those attending include S. R. Smith, C. M. Jones, C. E. Latham, M. M. Brown, L. J. Muniein, C. W. Cover, C. F. Stinson, D. L. Harris, W. F. Bender, G. B. Stamand, R. M. Russell, C. J. Rogers, L. J. Lister, K. R. Terry, S. D. Stone, H. H. Kappers, and E. S. D'Astoli.

Jim Mackie of the Davis Corner volunteer fire and rescue unit in Bayside Borough is acting as instructor in a regional first aid class for mothers which meets once a week.

While the subject is of a serious note, the sessions have their lighter moments. During the first class, Mackie was demonstrating how to apply pressure to the arm or neck to stop bleeding in cases of emergency. As Jim applied pressure to the arm of his woman volunteer, she turned to him, and in a soft pleading voice said: "Gently, I bruise easily".

Jr. Poets To Compete

Is there a juvenile poet in your house--namely, one in the first through seventh grade?

The three libraries in the Virginia Beach Public Library system are sponsoring a local poetry contest in conjunction with National Children's Book Week, which will be Oct. 23 to Nov. 4, according to Mrs. F.J. Finnigan, children's librarian.

The theme of the week is "Take Off with Books". Local rules are that Poems must be eight to twelve lines long, and include the theme in one line. Prizes will be awarded by each city library. They are the 22nd Street Library in the Beach Borough, Windsor Woods Library on S. Plaza Trail in Lynnhaven Borough and Bayside Library on Independence Boulevard in Bayside Borough.

Mrs. Finnigan said entries are being taken now, and children may obtain full rules at any of the city libraries.

Thomas O. Lavey, a summer policeman this year, wrote of the program in the September issue of the Virginia Law Weekly at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville. He is feature editor of the publication.

He uses the Virginia Beach Police Division as a model in examining the functions of today's police departments. After outlining the training, operation and other aspects of the local division, Lavey sums up:

"The police officer's task in Virginia Beach, as in all of America's cities, is complex, frustrating and interesting. His textbook functions include prevention of crime, protection of property, preservation of peace, the enforcement of laws and the detection and apprehension of criminals.

"However, there is one primary duty which all good police officers recognize--and that is to serve. It must be stressed that the patrolmen of Virginia

What About the Regional One?

The City Council of greater Virginia Beach on Monday of this week approved the appointment of two committees to study three matters vital to our city's future.

One of them will study what is needed in the way of convention facilities, and a major sports stadium to eventually serve all of the 160,000-plus residents of our community.

On this committee are Councilmen Lawrence Marshall of Bayside Borough and Albert L. Bonney Sr. of Kempsville Borough, and Assistant City Manager Roger W. Scott.

The other committee will at least, study a proposal for an airport near Ft. Story for small planes. On this committee are R. Bradshaw Pulley, Albin R. Mailhes and James P. Sadler of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce and Col. J. H. Reinburg, a retired U.S. Marine officer who suggested an airport last December. The chamber has been exploring the idea.

Since little was said about the direction of study either of the committees might take, it would be foolhardy to reach any conclusions on specifics for the moment.

However, since the studies deal with community needs reported in the SUN during the last year or so, we welcome the attention our City Fathers are giving to them. And we trust the committees will come up with workable, if long-range, recommendations for the future. Our bustling residential, commercial and industrial areas require attention along with the resort areas, as all indicators point to continued economic growth.

While our city's committee is studying the airport idea for small aircraft, perhaps cooperation among all cities south of Hampton Roads could lead to a regional airport in or near our community.

As the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN reported last week, something should be done now to plan for an airport which would become international in scope.

Columbus and That Pilot

Since the calendar and the Old Farmer's Almanac mark this as Columbus Day, we suppose it is appropriate to note an apparent new discovery by someone on The Virginia-Pilot newspaper of neighboring Norfolk.

The Aug. 21, 1967, issue of that newspaper referred to the economy of greater Virginia Beach as "sluggish." This upset some local businessmen and city officials in our community.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN in its Aug. 24 issue took note of objections which City Manager W. Russell Hatchett and George Davis, president of the local Innkeepers, made to the Pilot interpretation. The SUN also has pointed out at times that greater Virginia Beach is growing by leaps and bounds, economically, in all seven boroughs.

Now, just the other day the Pilot apparently made its discovery. "Va. Beach Season 'Best'," a headline said. The article on Oct. 5, 1967, noted a relative increase in the city's yield from what some call "tourist taxes" because travelers pay most of them.

Dialing for Numbers

Maybe it's the old numbers system that gets us mentally flabbergasted at times.

Take for instance, the thousands of times in the past that we dialed 113 to get "Information" from the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company system.

In case you haven't received the message, one of the business ladies at C & P's branch office in greater Virginia Beach said 113 has now been fully discontinued in our city.

The new number is 411. Just put on your thinking cap or hat, reverse numbers and go up one digit. Then you can remember it, we hope.

The records in the office of Giles Dodd, who heads the city government's finance department, reflect the good 1967 resort season. Some of our businessmen who sell food and drink, or provide room accommodations or both, knew it all along.

The resort season was tops here, while other cities along the eastern seaboard were having difficulties. Some in our city give credit for the season's success to the Chamber of Commerce, the city government's advertising program, the Ocean Highway Association and a spirit of cooperation.

Chances are they and others each played an important role, along with local leadership in greater Virginia Beach.

Anyway, we're glad to note that The Virginia-Pilot has made a discovery although belatedly, in this new era of discovering America.

As an added note, we wonder why the same newspaper, which basically serves Norfolk's residents, does not tell the people what happened in that city's resort area of Ocean View during the past season.

Out of the Darkness

This photo of a cargo ship at sea with a destroyer escort is a familiar sight to many seagoing Virginia Beach residents. In this case, it may be symbolic of increased attention being given the nation's ship yards in the light of the harvest moon. (Boice Studio Photo)

Dear Editor:

One of the most disconcerting, yet popular pastimes of a certain segment of our society is the apparent ease with which they are willing to criticize our classroom teachers.

In many instances these critics are parents with one, two, three or more tots that make their lives miserable, so some honestly claim.

Could you believe that some of these same folks expect the classroom teacher to take from 30 to 40-odd of their tots and house-break them, bus-load them, discipline them, exercise them, cold-weather-dress them, feed them and, with the passage of time left, educate them and return them as perfect children?

To make the classroom ten-ther's life more burdensome, we find some administrators treating the teacher's day as if the teacher were just an administrative chattel.

Our teachers are in dire need of auxiliary workhorses to do the menial jobs tossed in the laps of our teachers.

Our people had better correct some of these distorted attitudes toward our classroom teachers, or we as parents will have a bigger handful of trouble than we can imagine.

LWV on Issues

Dear Editor:

In reference to a letter signed R.L. Maryland, which appeared in the Sept. 21 issue of the SUN, the Overseas Education Fund of the League of Women Voters of the U.S. was established by the League in 1947. The OEF does not involve itself in issues—its goal is to introduce the process of democracy in order to achieve, in an orderly fashion the social advances a country may desire. We invite leaders from other countries to exchange and explore ideas about government, politics and citizen participation. Most people turning to OEF are seeking to know how voluntary citizen organizations work, and since we feel that the League of Women Voters is our best example, it is the accumulated experience of the League that we show.

The League of Women Voters promotes informed and active participation of citizens in government and thus involves itself in public issues but does not support any political party or candidate. The League does urge its individual members, except those serving as League leaders, to become active in the party of their choice.

The League of Women Voters has not taken any official position on the War in Vietnam.

Costs More to Be Poor

It now takes more money to be poor in these United States.

The Office of Economic Opportunity has issued new figures for judging whether an American is officially in the poverty class. Because of increase in food prices, most of the figures have been upped.

A non-farm resident, living alone, now is classified "poor" if he has an income of $1,600, for families, where formerly it was $1,500. Some other figures: Two persons, $2,000; three, $2,300; four, $1,200; seven, $4,700; ten, $5,200; twelve, $7,200.

It generally is necessary for OEO to have some sort of yardstick, but can cash income ever be an accurate indicator of poverty?

There is, in the first place, the difference in living costs. A family of four might get along well in some small town, where it can grow vegetables, buy meat from farmers, have inexpensive housing costs and little necessity for expensive transportation.

In a city, with high rent, long distances to work and school, and little opportunity to provide any of its own food, the same size family with similar income might be in dire trouble.

And there is a great difference in families. Two persons might, for instance, be an elderly couple. Their house is paid for, medicare pays their medical bills, and their clothing and entertainment costs are small. A working mother and a small child make a different story. There are baby-sitting fees, constant growing out of clothing, little likelihood of having a paid-up home.

It's an impossible task the nation has set for the OEO. But these experts on poverty should tell another government branch about that single person who is poverty-stricken on $1,600 a year. While that qualifies him for all sorts of consideration from OEO, the Internal Revenue Service is taxing him on $1,000 of his meager income.

Sun Report

Downing: 'Positive' War Stand Wanted

This week's Sun Report gives the full text of a statement Rep. Thomas N. Downing, who represents Virginia Beach, Newport News and Hampton in the U.S. House of Representatives, made last Friday, Oct. 6, on the Viet Nam war:

As you know, on Tuesday (Oct. 3) I spoke on the Floor of the House about the situation in Viet Nam. I had that day surprised a number of people who had had no opportunity to know personally of the degree of concern which I have felt for some time.

This was no sudden outburst on my part. I have known for a long time that the residents of the First District are considerably more aware of Viet Nam than is the average American. This is because of our close, personal association with so many of the fighting men. In practically all the conversations which I have had with my constituents over Viet Nam for several months, I have been assured that everyone wants to see us take a more positive stand. People are sick and tired of this war. They want it over, and they recognize, as do I, that in war there is no substitute for victory.

The remarks which I made on the Floor were prepared for delivery at Petersburg on Tuesday night, but earlier that day I felt that they expressed thoughts which should go to other members of the Congress.

Americans neither like nor understand the type of warfare that is going on in Viet Nam. The enemy there is willing to keep at it for years. There is some mistaken thought in this country that we can wear him down, exhaust his supplies, and win him off. It took the French 10 years, but in the end they found out that they could not do it. The tables were turned on them, and an unheard of jungle hoard defeated a mighty nation.

We cannot let this happen. That is why I proposed before them an opportunity to come to the bargaining table. If we will not, then we must do everything necessary to win. I am not talking about using our nuclear capability because in my opinion it is not necessary. As far as what we should do and how we should do it once we decide to end this war, I believe that we have military leadership which knows what will succeed. It will simply be up to the President to make the decision.

Oceanography; Language Problem Studied Here

BEACH BOROUGH--The man from Brooklyn was talking about trying to solve the problem of a communications gap between scientists and others, including sociologists, by teaching youngsters with a new method.

So who says scientists and sociologists aren't talking to each other now? No one, according to Dr. E.J. Piel of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn.

Dr. Piel claims children bound from Brooklyn are not engineering degrees, should be taught engineering concepts so they can better communicate with each other when working together after college.

For example, he said, an engineer's idea of what the word "stability" means is different than what the same word means to a sociologist.

The former U.S. Marine officer also said precise language is important in working with some computers, because persons give them verbal commands. The wrong word could foul up the electronics circuit, and this problem will increase with equipment now being developed.

Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn is planning a number of institutes throughout the United States under a National Science Foundation grant. Teachers will attend them to learn about what is called the "Engineering Concepts Curriculum Project."

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN interviewed Dr. Piel when he was at The Cavalier hotel last weekend for the 5th Annual State Science Teachers Conference sponsored by the Science Service, Virginia Department of Education, Teachers from public and private schools in the state attended.

Dr. Piel explained his "project" at the conference. Dr. Jeanette Piccard, widow of Jean Piccard, an aeronautical engineer and chemist noted for balloon flights in the sky in the 1930's, was Saturday's luncheon speaker. She spoke of "Pioneer Efforts Toward Space," backgrounding today's outer-space activity.

The luncheon followed a group of seminar discussions. Oceanography, with William A. Garth of the U. S. Naval Oceanographic Office presiding, proved to be the most popular among teachers, with about 150 signed up for that topic.

Dr. Samuel P. Maroney, associate professor of biology at the University of Virginia, headed a seminar on cytology; James Bene of NASA's Langley Research Center presided at one on fuel cells, and Dr. Alfred R. Armstrong of the College of William & Mary headed a seminar discussion on chromatography.

Dr. Stephen S. Winter of the School of Educational Studies at the State University of New York, Buffalo, lectured on "The Harvard Project Physics;" Dr. Arthur H. Livermore of the American Association for the Advancement of Science lectured on "Science-A Process Approach," and Dr. Frank A. Brown Jr. of Northwestern spoke on "The Biological Clock Problem."

Virginia Beach school officials who helped arrange the teachers conference here included School Supt. Frank W. Cox; Frank E. Taylor, a public school supervisor; and James N. Savage Jr., a teacher at Bayside High.

U. S. District Court Judge Richard B. Beach Equipment Firm Bets on Area Growth

KEMPSVILLE BOROUGH--A group of young men who are betting heavily on future port development in Hampton Roads have expanded their industrial-equipment operation on Military Highway north of Indian River Road here.

They also have added a new line of equipment for the lumber industry in some eastern sections of Virginia.

Bartley F. Tuthill, 40, is branch manager for the Virginia Beach office of Industrial Trucks, Inc., franchised dealer for the Clark powered material handling equipment. The business also handles the Canadian Car Co. Tree Farmer Log Skidder.

A recent sale went almost unnoticed. Industrial Cars here has ordered two Clark Van Carriers for the new Portsmouth Marine Terminal, expected to develop into a major containerized cargo port.

The Van Carrier picks up, hauls and stacks the huge, rectangular containers being used in the new shipping system. Some Clark equipment also is used at military bases, airports, warehouses and other places where material shifting is involved.

R.B. Ashmore, 34-year-old sales manager who lives in Lynnhaven Colony, explained how he has seen the local office of Industrial Trucks grow from a business with eight employees seven years ago to one with 26 employees now.

Industrial Trucks' main office is in Richmond, and George G. Burrus is president. The recent expansion of the Virginia Beach branch, which serves eastern Virginia, cost nearly $100,000 and doubled floor space at the facility in the 500 block of S. Military Highway.

Tuthill lives in Kings Grant in greater Virginia Beach. Other top executives with Ashmore are William Benjamin, assistant manager, of Great Neck; Jack Tesso, parts manager, of Chesapeake; and Jack Keeling, service manager, of Norfolk.

... A Wedding

A Run For Home

By Jeanne Magee Tucker
Women's Editor

It doesn't take Jeane Dixon's crystal ball to clue the city in to the fact that the season's over. . . and we're well into a beautiful, balmy fall.

When I left our city on the Atlantic for a look at a city on the Mediterranean, school had barely begun. When I returned, crackly leaves were everywhere but on the trees. Suddenly we'd moved into a brand new season and I loved it.

I loved the feeling of fall in the air. . . the beautiful autumn sun. . . the talk of football games, Thanksgiving dinners to come. . . babies on the way. . . holiday bazaars. . .

But most of all I just loved hearing talk. . . of anything. . . so long as it was a language I could understand and respond to.

The excitement of foreign travel notwithstanding, hearing, "It's good to have you home" and replying with utmost humility "It's good to be home" are among the most welcome and sincere words I've ever heard or spoken.

A friend once told me that I would experience a great, great thrill at my first sight of a foreign land. She was wrong. One of the greatest moments of my lifetime was not my first glimpse of Europe but rather my first glimpse of New York AFTER my first glimpse of Europe.

Memories of castles and churches, donkey carts and motor scooters faded into the background. . . and there they'll stay.

They are monumental in their importance and a flip remark of mine. . . one made without too much thought I'm afraid. . . that "see one you see them all" (met with shock and incredulity I must admit) was trite and now causes me pain. But all these things by comparisons went through my mind as we approached dusty, dirty practically infantile, New York.

But of all the thoughts, the most profound, no doubt, was of the service men who return. . . not after three luxurious weeks of carefree vacationing but after months of involuntary foreign living. . . and how overwhelming must be their reactions to our bustling young metropolis.

The tears came. . . whether I wanted them to or not.

A look at Spain was all I'd hoped it would be. . . but the look at America was much, much more than I'd ever dreamed it would be.

It's so good to be home.

Miss Maureen Elaine Byrtus and Second Lt. Ralph John Cerino Jr. were married Saturday, Oct. 7, in St. Nicholas Catholic Church here.

The Rev. Thomas C. Nash of Pocahontas, Iowa, uncle of the bride, performed the double ring ceremony. Co-celebrants of the Nuptial Mass were the Rev. John Henry of DePaul Hospital, Norfolk, and the Rev. Thomas Summers, pastor of St. Nicholas.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Byrtus. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph J. Cerino; both families are of Virginia Beach.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and had her sister, Miss Barbara Anne Byrtus, as maid of honor. Miss Kathy Byrtus was junior bridesmaid.

Author, Lecturer Visits Here

The Scientific Approach

LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH--A nattily-dressed educator visited Virginia Beach Friends last week to spark their science salesmanship.

Glen Blough, professor of education at the University of Maryland, spoke with Friends School parents Thursday night and conducted teacher workshops at the school Friday to bring to them his lively suggestions for presenting science to the elementary school pupil.

Long an advocate of putting life into what has, for too long and to too many been a dull and dreary subject to teach, Blough has written books (several presently in use at Friends School here), lectured, and himself taught in elementary schools, projecting his inquisitiveness and curiosity to his students, in his words, "an asking rather than a telling type of teaching."

"This, in my opinion, is one of the main disadvantages of educational TV. For teachers it's fine, but for the pupil, it is, of necessity, a telling method instead of a method whereby the pupil seeks out the answers himself, rather than having the answers told to him."

It is this natural curiosity, Blough feels, that sparks the pupil's interest... teaching him to learn to think for himself, provoking him to dig for the answers to the whys and wherefores of the scientific world.

"A great problem in our schools today is that elementary teachers have a number of subjects which they must, hopefully with enthusiasm, teach in the classrooms."

"Unfortunately, science is, to

Ah... Spain!

By Jeanne Magee Tucker

In Spain, where almost as much emphasis is placed on men's fashions as on women's, it seemed obvious that in addition to the countryside, Glen Blough had visited the men's shops.

His impeccably-tailored Continental-type dark blue suit had all the earmarks of Spanish design and fit. Surprisingly enough, though, it came from New York, not Spain.

Straightening the two vents in the back of his coat as he stood, a practice that Spanish men do as gracefully and unconsciously as they light their cigarettes, he laughed at the question, but replied that on the contrary he'd bought the suit in New York before he left.

"Clothes in Europe are expensive, though Spain is indeed, far less expensive than the rest of Europe."

most women (and most teachers are women), an unknown quantity; therefore they are inclined to give it no more time than they absolutely have to. Often this is because they themselves are a little afraid of it; they don't know the answers so they avoid getting themselves into a position of having to give the answers.

If we talked more of Spain than science, it stemmed from the fact that the first day back on the job after a three-week holiday to Spain led to an interview with one also just returned.

Of Spain, Blough was as enthusiastic and logical as he was of science.

"I decided to spend my time in the larger cities rather than take the back roads because neither I nor my friend with whom I traveled could speak Spanish. We knew that in the larger cities English-speaking people can generally be found."

"Compared with France or for that matter, any other country in Europe, Spain is inexpensive, delightful and fascinating."

Compared with science, Spain was much more common ground.

A Fashion First

Chesapeake Beach Women's Club members realized some $350 from their first venture into the world of fashion.

That sum, earmarked for the club's educational projects, represents profits from the group's first fashion show-luncheon which was held last week in Bow Creek Country Club. Fashion were from Rices.

Some were on hand for bridge which preceded the luncheon; most were on hand for the highlight of the event... a mink stole which was carried home by Mrs. Francis Bazemore.

Among the guests at the Chesapeake Beach Women's Club luncheon: Mrs. Michael DeLaura and Mrs. C. T. Saunders.

WOMEN INVESTORS

Shopping For Securities

By Betty McClane

Mrs. McClane

The American woman is the world's greatest comparative shopper. When the weekend supermarket specials appear in the paper, she pores over them searching for the best bargains. This practice in comparing and taking advantage of bargains makes her a natural for investing.

An investment is the purchase of securities that provide a reasonable expectation of good income, capital growth, or both, over a period of time. Success in picking investment-quality securities is the result of comparisons which require only time, patience and information--the same things necessary for making good buys in groceries.

Thanks to the Securities and Exchange Commission, the government agency for the regulation of the securities business, and the New York Stock Exchange, most of the information needed is available. Companies themselves are becoming more aware of the need for an informed public interested in the purchase of their stocks.

Annual reports are becoming more attractive and simpler to interpret every year. A little diligent digging--which can prove fascinating--can unearth the not-too-obvious facts that indicate the real value of a security.

There is no substitute for research and common sense when picking an investment. The woman who consistently invests profitably does so by making careful selections based on investigation into management, research, marketing methods, labor relations, past performance and future prospects. She then compares a security with others in the same industry. If she uses and likes the company's products, all the better.

Her reaction is a reflection of consumer demand, and happy consumers make company profits. Or she may have been impressed by the prompt way in which a complaint to the company was handled showing concern for customer satisfaction. Details are as important in the functioning of a corporation as they are in household management.

Women usually have a great advantage over men in comparative shopping, whether groceries or securities. The advantage lies in the fact that women rarely buy anything on impulse--except hats. Shop for your securities, girls, as you would shop for weekend specials at the supermarket, and you will reap financial rewards. The bargains are always there but they must be found.

Art Workshop Teachers to Learn Methods

Mrs. Callaway will conduct an art workshop for public school teachers in Virginia Beach.

Fifty elementary teachers from the City of Virginia Beach Public Schools will attend an Art Workshop on Oct. 18, 19, 20, at the First Colonial High School. It was announced recently by Frank Cox, superintendent of schools.

A free educational service provided by Binney & Smith Inc., manufacturers of crayons and other school art supplies, the workshop will be conducted by Mrs. Jane Callaway, who has taught extensively and holds a Master's degree from Columbia University.

The teachers will spend 15 hours of their own time learning about modern creative art education and some of its materials and tools. They will learn by doing, rolling up their sleeves and trying out the techniques presented by Mrs. Callaway.

These techniques will include some of the uses of crayons, water colors, poster paints, finger paints, colored chalks and modeling clay. Simple craft techniques will also be shown, giving teachers an opportunity to work with paper, paste and other materials to gain three-dimensional effects. All of the Art Workshop activities will be experiences which the teachers can relate to their own classroom teaching.

School officials responsible for workshop arrangements, in addition to Supt. Cox, include Mrs. Gail Presson, art supervisor.

Army Offers Scholarships

Local high school seniors are eligible for college scholarships offered by U.S. Army -- with a better chance of winning if they are in the upper 20 per cent of their classes, are student body presidents, have earned varsity letters or are Eagle Scouts, according to the statistics on 1966 winners.

The scholarships will be good at any of 247 colleges and universities in the United States offering the Reserve Officers Training Corps program. Young men may choose their own field of study, and the only requirement will be that they take ROTC.

The scholarships pay full tuition, textbooks and laboratory fees and provide a $50 monthly allowance for four years. Upon graduation from college the scholarship students are commissioned second lieutenants in the U.S. Army. For further information, write: ROTC Scholarship, First U.S. Army, Fort Meade, Md. 20755.

Cavaliers & Knights Clash

Princess Anne High's undefeated Cavaliers, with their eyes on the Eastern District football championship in future weeks, will be after Win No. 6 in the season in a game with the Kellam High Knights this week.

And Coach Charlie Caldwell's Knights have been preparing a smoother offense for their toughest game of the season thus far.

The Cavaliers and the Knights meet on the Kellam football field off Holland Road in Princess Anne Borough at 8 p.m., and most fans will get there early.

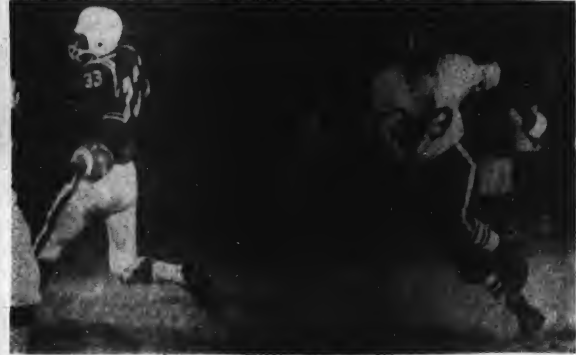

Cavalier coach John Grady has some of the best defensive players in the district in Ed Love, Steve Sakis, John Kiefer, Robert Gerloff, Paul Ziegler and Mickey Byrd.

While some play offense, too, they were in on the defensive move that stopped Norview's Pilots from scoring late in last Friday's game, which Princess Anne won 7 to 0.

Grady's eleven will be out to stop Kellam's Bob Carson and Ernie Brown this week. But offense play by Carson and Brown, plus David Pace and Dooley Bizzell have been aided by a team defensive effort in winning the last three games. Kellam beat Indian River 27 to 0 last week.

The Knight's Bob Carson (10) had pressure on him, but he scored a touchdown on a long run and passed for tow more TD's last Friday against Indian River. (Raper Photo)

There was a loose football for a moment in Union Kempsville's game last week, and Booker-T capitalized on it to win. (C. Phelps Photo)

Ken Reightler recovered the fumbled football (arrow) for the Marlins, and they scored a touchdown against the Hornets last Friday. (C. Phelps Photo)

Jr. Knights Stop Kempsville

Kellam High's undefeated junior varsity football team, which toppled those Kempsville Jayvees from the unbeaten ranks 14 to 7 last week, go after a fifth win against First Colonial's junior varsity at First Colonial today at 4 p.m. in Lynnhaven Borough.

After last week's game, the Kellam juniors, coached by Roy Ammons and Adrian Brown, is the only undefeated local team in the jayvee circuit for senior high schools. First Colonial's juniors last week lost to the Cox squad by a 6 to 18 score, making it the fourth loss.

The Cox jayvees, coached by Stuart Holland, were scheduled to play Kempsville's prep club in Kempsville Borough at 7:30 p.m. today. Last week's Cox win over the junior Patriots was the first victory after a tie against Bayside and a close loss to Kellam. The Kempsville Braves, coached by Tracy L. Moon, had won two and managed a tie before losing to the Kellam team last week.

Princess Anne's junior varsity, after an open date last week ventures into Chesapeake today to take on the Great Bridge jayvees, according to coach Donald Van Benschoten. The Cavalier juniors have a 2-1 record, with the only loss to Kellam, Donald J. Davis is Benschoten's assistant.

The Bayside Marlin jayvees, with a 1-1 record after a schedule mix-up last week, is at home in Bayside Borough against the jayvees of Granby from neighboring Norfolk at 7:30 p.m. Coach Joe Lee Cox, who is assisted by Tony South and Conrad Parker, said the Cradock jayvees arrived for an afternoon game last Thursday, although a night game was scheduled, and then went home.

Willie L. Braye's Virginia Beach Jr. High team in the Beach Borough tied the Norfolk Catholic jayvees 0 to 0 last week to remain undefeated after two games. Braye's team goes against a tough Norview squad in neighboring Norfolk this Saturday, Oct. 14 at 10 a.m.

Kempsville High's junior-junior club (8th graders), coached by Bob Booth, will be looking for its first win this Saturday against Maury's junior-junior team at 10 a.m. at Maury in Norfolk.

Concert to Feature Variety of Music

When Russell Stanger brings his Norfolk Symphony Orchestra to a Virginia Beach audience on Thursday, Oct. 19, he will feature as soloist of the evening Dora Marshall Short, concert mistress of the orchestra, in a Mozart violin concerto.

Mrs. Short is also well known to Tidewater musical audiences as first violinist of the Feldman String Quartet.

The colorful program has been planned to appeal to a large audience, including many who may not have had an opportunity to hear the Norfolk Symphony. The program will open with Borodin's "Overture to Prince Igor", which will depict a ballet scene of Russian-oriental splendor. Several popular tunes have been taken from Borodin's ballet music. The second work will feature Mrs. Short as soloist in Mozart's Concerto #5 for Violin.

After intermission Stanger will conduct the "L'Arlesienne Suite #1" of Bizet, the same composer who wrote the brilliant opera "Carmen". Concluding the program will be selections from Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition".

This concert is being jointly sponsored by the Virginia Beach Friends of Music and the Old Dominion Symphony Council.

In addition to this month's concert, the Virginia Beach Friends of Music will present a Jan. 25 appearance of the Feldman String Quartet, and a March 21 performance by the Norfolk Symphony "Little Orchestra", which is a condensation of the orchestra to chamber orchestra size. All concerts are at Princess Anne High School at 8:30 p.m.

Shiftless

The new 1968 Peugeot 404 sedan and 404 station wagon are positively shiftless.

How come?

New automatic transmission.

404 Station Wagon

Now, this is no ordinary automatic, just as the Peugeot 404 is no ordinary car. (We didn't spend years perfecting it, just to be like everyone else.) Our new automatic transmission is custom designed from scratch to be completely compatible with the new 80-horse Peugeot engine. It's so efficient, smooth, and silent that none of the Peugeot power or performance is lost. (And you still get over 25 miles to the gallon.) What's more, this new automatic transmission, is still our only optional extra. As always, we include over $500's worth of "extras" at no extra cost: sliding sun roof, carpeting throughout, safety padded reclining bucket seats, Michelin X tires (three layers of steel cord), padded dashboard, power brakes, heater & defroster, windshield washer, and center arm rest. Now, if you're the type who still likes to shift for himself, we also have a standard 4 speed synchronized transmission.

Beach and Chesapeake To Join for College?

The Virginia Beach community College Study Committee, headed by City Councilman George R. Ferrell, is considering at least three possible sites for a proposed community college here.

Ferrell said the decision on a site will be made by the State Community College Board in advance of the 1968 General Assembly session, where state legislators will approve the location of various colleges in a statewide system started by the 1966 General Assembly.

Among aims of the community college program, according to some informed sources, is to ease pressure on senior colleges and universities which look to the state for considerable financial support. The community colleges are to serve equally for adults and younger persons.

At least two of the sites being considered by the local board are in Kempsville Borough at the Virginia Beach-Chesapeake boundary line, Chesapeake and Portsmouth have both been bidding for a community college.

Some officials in Virginia Beach and Chesapeake consider a location to serve both cities, as well as possibly Norfolk and Portsmouth residents, would help cooperation among the cities on this side of Hampton Roads.

A pair of 100-acre sites offered in Kempsville Borough are near where Interstate 64 here and in Chesapeake will be opened to traffic in coming months. In general, the area is south of Indian River Road and east of Military Highway.

Both Virginia Beach and Chesapeake appear to meet site requirements, such as 1,000 high school graduates annually and populations of 100,000 or more.

However, when the City of Portsmouth annexes a large chunk of Chesapeake's population in the Western Branch area on Jan. 1, 1968, as a three-judge court recently decreed, Virginia Beach will more easily qualify for the actual site.

On the Virginia Beach committee with Ferrell are School Supt. Frank W. Cox, upcoming Supt. Edward E. Brickell Jr., and Councilmen Lawrence Marshall and G. Dewey Simmons.

They were named to the committee by Mayor Frank A. Dusch months ago with the consent of Vice Mayor Robert B. Cromwell, John W. McCombs, Kenneth N. Whitehurst Sr., Earl Tebault, D. Murray Malbon and Albert L. Bonney Sr., Councilman Curtis Payne, who succeeded the late S. Paul Brown, was not on the City Council at the time.

Program To Celebrate UN Day

BEACHBOROUGH--An special program is scheduled for the observance of United Nations Day in greater Virginia Beach for 2:45 p.m., Oct. 22 at the Civic Center.

The program is free and will feature selections sung by "Sing Out Virginia Beach," a Danny Kaye UNICEF movie and a promenade of young ladies in costumes of foreign lands. Displays and literature will be available.

Mayor Frank A. Dusch named the following persons to the United Nations Day Committee 67: Mrs. Hugh P. Fortescue, Mrs. E. W. Abdill and Col. Jerome K. Hostetter (USA Ret.), co-chairman; Mrs. Daniel J. Sleevinski, executive assistant for operations; Mrs. Richard Gordon, assistant for operations; Mrs. Gilbert Friedman, executive assistant for Civic Center activities; Mrs. John Currie, assistant for Civic Center decorations.

Even Arthur Likes Beach

Arthur Godfrey, the chuckling redhead of radio and TV fame, said he meant it when he recently mentioned Virginia Beach on a coast-to-coast broadcast in early September.

Mayor Frank A. Dusch, who heard of the mention, wrote a letter of thanks to Godfrey, saying he "greatly appreciated" the Godfrey gesture.

"You're welcome, your honor," Godfrey scribbled on the letter. "Wouldn't have said it if I didn't mean it."

Proposed School Buildings Keyed to Suburban Needs

PR. ANNE BOROUGH--A proposed public school building program for the city which hinges on a future bond referendum is an "absolute necessity" to meet school classroom needs by September of 1969, according to Chairman J. W. Buffington of the City School Board.

At VIRGINIA BEACH SUN press time this week, the board was scheduled to meet with City Council to discuss classroom construction needs and how to finance them for the next two years.

School officials have proposed a $14.5-million bond issue, which would be voted on by the people of Virginia Beach's seven boroughs in the near future. The bonds would be sold as needed to pay construction and equipment bills.

While state law this year limits any further bond issues to about $15 million, suburban growth has been increasing the city's borrowing capacity at the rate of nearly $3 million a year. Development plans in Lynnhaven, Bayside, Kempsville and Princess Anne boroughs indicate this will continue.

There also is a possibility of more financial aid from the state government when the 1968 General Assembly meets early next year.

What the School Board proposed are new high (or junior high) schools and new elementary schools in each of the city's most populous boroughs--Lynnhaven, Bayside, Kempsville.

The building program, which would provide jobs for builders and more teachers, as well as educate children, also includes:

- * A Vocational-Technical Center for 600 students from all sections of the city and involving an estimated $1.25 million in state and federal aid plus $1.17 million in local funds.
- * Additions with 15 classrooms for First Colonial High in Lynnhaven Borough and Kempsville High in Kempsville Borough.
- * Additions with four classrooms each for Trantwood, Lynnhaven and Malibu elementary in Lynnhaven Borough; Pembroke Elementary in Bayside Borough and Kempsville Elementary in Kempsville Borough.

The bond-issue proposal includes $300,000 for new stadiums recently completed at First Colonial and Bayside High Schools. School officials built them in anticipation of voter approval.

Detailed planning already has started on the Vocational-Technical school and what would start out as a 1400-student junior high for the Princess Anne Plaza area.

New elementary schools at Pembroke Meadows, Windsor Woods and in the Kempsville area would have 31 classrooms. High schools proposed in Bayside and Kempsville boroughs would be for 1,500 students.

The city's public school population has been increasing at a rate of nearly 2,000 a year as a result of suburban development, and there are now about 38,600 students.

361 Motel Units Rise at Beach

Five motels with 251 units are under construction in the city, most of them in the Beach Borough along the oceanfront boardwalk.

Construction of the motels, indicate businessmen are counting on increased travel and tourist activity in the city next year.

A new Holiday Inn motel is being built beside Northampton Boulevard in Bayside Borough by Bob Mott. It will have 120 units.

Motels being built in the Beach Borough are the "Judy Lowe" on Atlantic Avenue, 25 units; the "Beach Carousel" at 13th Street and Pacific Avenue, 38 units; a 40-unit motel between Arctic and Pacific avenues on 23rd Street, and a 39-unit one at 29th Street and Pacific Avenue.

Yes' Votes Have Lead in SUN Poll

As of last Monday's mail, early returns from the SUN Poll on the question of the local right to vote on whiskey sales indicated a heavy expression in favor of it.

Since the poll began with last week's edition of the newspaper, it will be continued for a number of weeks, giving all local readers a chance to express their position.

The outcome of the SUN Poll could determine how state legislators representing the city will act when the question of changing state liquor laws arises in the 1968 General Assembly.

How About It?

The 1968 General Assembly of Virginia is expected to consider legislation proposed to give voters in each city and county the right to decide whether they want whiskey sold by the drink, under specific controls, within their own community.

Since the question has been debated in greater Virginia Beach's seven boroughs for years, the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN is conducting a "straw poll" on the question. Clip the coupon below, write "yes" or "no" and mail as directed. One per reader, please, with signatures optional.

Should voters in each community have the right to decide how whiskey is sold within their community?

The Answer Is Obvious

It seems like everytime we turn around these days, someone is talking about spending more tax money for this and that.

Right now, there is quite a bit of attention in our city of greater Virginia Beach's seven boroughs on a proposed bond referendum for public schools.

Virginia law gives the voters of each community the right to decide whether or not they want to authorize their local governing body to issue bonds, as cash is needed, to pay for new public school buildings.

It apparently will besome time before we get a chance to vote on the question. But there are some in our community who already are criticizing the proposed school-building program.

In the first place, perhaps they do not realize that the City School Board and City Council have the firm responsibility for future capital improvements to keep up with suburban growth.

Some of them also may not know that in recent years, the voters of our city have given overwhelming support to bond programs for the public schools, so essential for educating our children. Private schools we should note, also play an important part in education. Among other things, they provide competition to spur improvements to public education in communities.

In the light of today's municipal bond market, it would be unwise for City Council to actually sell city bonds. The interest rates would be too high, costing the taxpayers more in the long run.

But bonds can be sold at times when the market is favorable, after temporarily using cash available through short-term borrowing. Cities have been doing this for years. In any event, the school bonds needed to finance school improvements for the next few years would spread the cost to taxpayers over a period of many years.

Our City School Board and City Council have the local responsibility of providing the best educational facilities they can, within reasonable limitations, in cooperation with proper state and federal officials. The councilmen and school board members cannot and should not shirk their responsibility.

At the same time, it is our responsibility as citizens to support them in the effort to provide our city's children with the finest schools possible so they can take advantage of the growing number of opportunities in future years.

It is not a question of whether we can afford to provide the best schools. It is a question of whether we can afford not to. And the answer to that question is obvious.

The many sons, daughters, grandchildren, nephews, nieces and cousins in our bustling community with a promising future deserve the best.

They Deserve Thanks, not Pranks

Caring for and protecting the children in our city of greater Virginia Beach is the task of many individuals and groups, including parents, school officials, churches, court officials and others.

There is one agency, however, which seldom gets the praise deserved for what it does, perhaps because some tend to view it as an agency which interferes with the pursuit of happiness by youth in our city.

This is the Youth Bureau of the Police Department, or Division, which has been doing a commendable job for many years. The SUN in past issues has noted its excellent crime-prevention program before this.

We now learn that our faith in the bureau's efficiency, particularly the crime prevention program, has been recognized nationally.

Don Rademacher, who has been surveying local law-enforcement in relation to our community's children, recently described the local Youth Bureau as "one of the best we have ever found." He is with the National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

The Youth Bureau earned the praise, and we are sure its members will continue looking out for those youngsters who can be helped, and others who deserve punishment, such as "kids" who are more than just "being kids."

Fun is fun, and pranks are pranks. But as Halloween approaches--less than two weeks away, you know--it's nice to feel confident the competent members of the youth bureau will be on the job.

Still Two Lanes

This tree-shaded, narrow stretch of Shore Drive through Seashore State Park in Lynnhaven Borough is the last in a four-laning program for the highway across northern Virginia Beach which the Virginia Highway Department began years ago. If the state does not start construction soon, traffic will be bottle-necked for two more summers on the highway (U.S. 60).

A Parallel

Dear Editor:

In the 17th Chapter of the Book of Exodus we read: "And Amalec came and fought against Israel in Raphidim. And Moses said to Josue: Choose out men and go out and fight against Amalec. Tomorrow I will stand on the top of the hill, having the rod of God in my hand. Josue did as Moses had spoken, and he fought against Amalec; but Moses, Aaron and Hur went up to the top of the hill. And when Moses lifted up his hands, Israel overcame; but if he let them down a little, Amalec overcame."

"And Moses' hands were heavy; so they took a stone and put it under him and he sat on it; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands on both sides. And it came to pass that his hands were not weary until sunset. And Josue put Amalec and his people to flight by the edge of the sword. And the Lord said to Moses: Write this for a memorial in a book and deliver it to the ears of Josue; for I will destroy the memory of Amalec from under heaven."

Thus did Israel conquer Amalec by the power of Moses' prayer. When his hands were raised aloft in supplication to the Lord, Israel overcame; but if he let them down a little, Amalec overcame. If they became heavy beyond endurance, he had help.

The parallel is applied to the modern world, where the armies of Communism are bent upon overcoming the people of God and claiming the world for His enemies. If enough hands are raised in prayer, the forces of freedom triumph; when they are not, the tide of battle turns against us in every case.

Would that more leaders in church and state and in all forms of communication media realized and emphasized this great truth. In these grave times we need strong faith and firm trust in God, our Creator and Re-

Customer's Not Always Right

The newspaper is unique among businesses. It must, as a matter of course and of deliberate policy, believe that the customer is not always right.

Our customers are our readers and our advertisers. Yet, the newspaper, if it is to keep its self respect, must at times take political stands which it knows will offend many of its readers and print news stories which it knows will displease an advertiser.

The result may be a dropped subscription or a cancelled ad, but the newspaper has no choice. Or, rather, it does have a choice, but if it compromises, if it lets itself be edited by pressures of whatever kind, then it is through, because eventually this lack of courage and honesty will catch up with it.

Kin Hubbard, the Hoosier humorist, had a paragraph once which should be inscribed on the stone over the entrance to every school of journalism.

"Tilford Moots was over to the poor farm to see an old friend who published a newspaper to please everybody."

Sun Report Byrd Presses UN To Act on War

This week's Sun Report offers the full text of an amendment which U. S. Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr. of Virginia offered last week to the State Department Appropriation Bill. The amendment was approved:

"It is the sense of the Congress that the United States government through its representatives in the United Nations, having advocated economic sanctions against Rhodesia, should initiate and support in the United Nations economic sanctions against North Viet Nam at whose hands the United States has suffered 55,888 casualties during the first nine months of 1967."

Senator Byrd in his speech to the Senate asked "how can the United States justify demanding economic sanctions, namely trade embargo, against Rhodesia and refuse to seek sanctions against North Viet Nam?"

"The United Nations" was designed to help keep the peace. Viet Nam, not Rhodesia, is where the war is. And Viet Nam is where the United Nations should direct its efforts.

"During 1966, 240 ships flying the flags of Viet Nam members delivered cargo to the North Vietnamese port of Haiphong. During recent months there has been an increase in shipping through Haiphong."

"For example, during the month of June, four times as much shipping went through that port as it did for the corresponding month of 1965. And a majority of those ships flew the flag of free world nations."

"The United States is suffering heavy casualties in Viet Nam, 55,888 during the first nine months of 1967."

"I say to my fellow Senators, if we are going to continue to keep troops in Viet Nam I feel we must use every diplomatic and financial pressure available to bring this war to a speedy and honorable conclusion. Economic sanctions by the United Nations would be one additional pressure."

Spong's Oil Pollution Bill Moves in Senate

A bill to strengthen U.S. oil pollution laws, which is being co-sponsored by U.S. Senator William B. Spong, Jr., moved closer to becoming law last week when a subcommittee of the Senate Public Works Committee gave it unanimous approval.

Senator Spong, who is a member of the Subcommittee, predicted that the full Public Works Committee would endorse the bill and report it to the floor of the Senate.

He traced his interest in stronger oil pollution laws to recent spillages in Virginia. "Costly oil spillages at Yorktown last spring and near Reedville on the Northern Neck during the summer underlined the need for new legislation in this area," he said.

At the time of the Yorktown spill, he asked the U.S. Department of the Interior to take any remedial steps it could to correct the damages. After a study of the Yorktown situation, the Department reported that, under existing law, it could take no action.

Spong then joined in sponsorship of a bill to strengthen enforcement provisions of the Oil Pollution Act. The bill drafted by the Subcommittee last week combines this and several other proposals.

According to Spong, current law covers only ship spillages, whereas the new bill would also include terminal and shore facilities in its provisions.

Another strengthening proposal would eliminate the present requirement that the Interior Department prove "grossly negligent" action on the part of the persons or companies responsible for the pollution in order to obtain convictions or compensatory damages.

The new bill would further clarify the authority of the Secretary of the Interior to enforce the oil pollution law and to require clean-up of property damaged by the spilled oil. Exceptions would be made in cases of spillage resulting from action taken to save life or property or from unavoidable collision, stranding or accident.

Spong said that the Subcommittee drafted its bill in light of a series of hearings held during the summer. Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall and Congressman Thomas N. Downing of Virginia's First Congressional District both testified and supported stronger oil pollution legislation.

2 Moving Firms Operate at Oceana

LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH--A local businessman, who moves furniture and other household goods for civilians and service personnel, has combined most of the headquarters for two corporations on Virginia Beach Boulevard in the west part of Oceana here.

Willis A. Keton, 42, president of Keton Transfer & Storage, Inc., previously located on Newtown Road in Bayside Borough, bought Virginia Beach Transfer, Inc., in the summer of this year, he said.

Keton, who lives in the Lynnhaven Colony section of Lynnhaven Borough, started in the business of moving as a truck driver and rose to a position of ownership and management, in his latest business move, he said he has kept all employees.

The two Virginia corporations are used for moving household goods within the state of Virginia, Keton explained. They are separate and operate out of different offices at the headquarters.

Keton Transfer & Storage, Inc., also is local representative principally for Atlas Van Lines; and Virginia Beach Transfer is local representative principally for Weathers Brothers Van Lines, Inc., according to Keton.

The corporations are involved in storing and in moving household goods domestically and overseas for military personnel, Keton said this makes it possible for each of them to be local representatives for other interstate moving businesses.

He said Virginia Beach Transfer, Inc., provides service to military personnel through Sudduth Van & Storage and Industrial Sea Van, Inc. He added that Keton Transfer & Storage provides service to the military through Pyramid Van Lines, Inc.

Sand, steel, wood framing and concrete blocks, like those at this new Holiday Inn Motel being built beside Northampton Boulevard, Bayside Borough, reflect the faith of businessmen in more travel and tourist business in Virginia Beach in coming years.

Spare-Time Artist Helps School

KEMPSVILLE BOROUGH--"It's a lot of fun, that's why I don't mind doing it."

That's Joseph Bright's explanation of why he spends his days off and free time working on posters and other art work for Thalia Elementary School.

Bright, who lives on Hornell Lane in Birchwood, has a daughter who is now in sixth grade at Thalia. He volunteered to do art work for the school when she was in the first grade and has progressed with her. His reputation grew, and now all the faculty call upon him.

His latest project was decorating the library for a P-TA open house. He worked on it about two weeks including one Sunday.

"Sherry Lynn (his daughter) told me Mrs. McClintock (the librarian) wanted it done, so I got to work," Bright said.

Bright, who works for the circulation department of a Norfolk newspaper, took one year of art at the Norfolk branch of William and Mary (now Old Dominion) in 1949. He plans on returning to the classroom at Old Dominion College in February.

"I'm losing my touch because I don't do enough of it," said the gray-haired artist, "I always volunteer for art work."

He said he has exhibited art work in the Boardwalk Art Show several years. His specialty has been Civil War paintings, but now he hopes to branch out into ancient Roman scenes.

Dr. Kahn Heads Eye Symposium

Dr. Howard D. Kahn of greater Virginia Beach is chairman of a symposium planned Saturday, Oct. 21, by the School of Education at Old Dominion College and the Virginia Optometric Association.

It is for teachers and other interested professionals and will be at the new Lewis Webb Center on the Old Dominion campus in neighboring Norfolk.

Drs. S. Alan Cohen and Daniel Woolf will be featured on the program.

Homemaker Service Provides Needed Aid

The Child and Family Service which serves Virginia Beach, as well as Norfolk and Chesapeake, is one of 805 agencies providing homemaker-home health aide service in the United States and Puerto Rico, which are listed in the 1966-67 Directory of Homemaker-Home Health Aide Services in New York City.

Earl D. Morris, executive director, explained that homemaker-home health aide service is the placement of a trained, mature, professionally supervised woman in the home to assist individuals and families during a period of stress. The service is sponsored by the Child and Family Service as a member agency of the United Communities Fund.

Rear Adm. and Mrs. C. Edwin Bell.

Little Creek Officers' Wives Club rolled out the pumpkins Saturday into Rockwell Hall and had a ball.

They also rolled out the miles and miles of tinsley overhead purchased several seasons ago to help the appearance as well as the accoustics, so the big, barren building, ideal for such events, looked a little like late harvest and early holiday.

It was the annual fund-raising Harvest ball, a wives' club social that reaps funds for area-wide projects, to the tune of the big Navy School of Music band and the wives' expert planning.

A Bloomin' Show

By Jeanne Magee Tucker
Women's Editor

They rose to the occasion... all those who picked and packed their choicest blooms for the 31st annual Rose Show held here last week.

Once here, rosarians examined and sorted, some from baskets full, literally, before choosing those blooms they thought merited display, maybe just one for an arrangement. But make no mistake: that one was one from many, chosen only after utmost consideration and careful scrutiny.

Rows and rows of roses, lines and lines of spectators... at the 31st annual Garden Club of Virginia Rose Show.

Said one spectator, "Some exhibitors came with their cars filled with roses, but from them all they might select only one or two for display."

I liked best the great massive arrangements... filled with color and variety... each stem meticulously measured and placed, the completed arrangement displayed on tall pedestals, to best show them off.

The rosarians converged on the Beach from all over the state. At 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, the first day of the show and some 30 minutes before awards were presented, the Cavalier Beach Club had about reached its capacity: noses and roses.

The long lines of people moved up and down the aisles, sniffing and examining the cream of Virginia's roses.

Here for the exhibition was a trio of Danville clubwomen researching the show... picking up pointers (rejecting a few, too) in preparation for next year's show which is scheduled for their area.

Photographers were busy too... with their tripods and equipment, some photographing for national publications, others for their own club scrapbooks.

It was all very exciting... and smelled sweetly of success.

Bouquets to the Princess Anne Garden Club members who handled the Garden Club of Virginia show... a really big event among rosarians and garden clubbers.

Silver julep cups were presented to Rose Show winners by Mrs. Benjamin F. Parrott, president of the Garden Club of Virginia. With her is the president of the sponsoring club, Mrs. Robert H. Etheredge of the Princess Anne Garden Club.

Mrs. Harvey E. Rawls, guest speaker, discussed National Defense.

On the Bazaar Circuit

Methodist Happening 'In the Cards'

Joy Talley and Mrs. William Vaughn check the cards as they make final plans for the Methodist Church Bazaar scheduled for Nov. 8.

"For the church, yes, I'll agree to a picture, but for personal gains, no."

"I don't need publicity... I don't really want it. I have all the appointments now that I can handle, and though I have private readings as a source of income, I have all I can handle right now. I don't need any more."

So Joy Talley, spiritualist, psychic, clairvoyant, will this year again donate her time to the Virginia Beach Methodist Church, setting up shop at their annual holiday bazaar Nov. 8.

It's been her custom to do so each year, and with the exception of last year when it could not be arranged, Joy's booth has proven to be one of the most popular and financially rewarding attractions of the church women's annual fund-raising project.

For one dollar she'll read 15 minutes... cards or palms.

Far from a newcomer to the Beach, knowledge of Joy's gift of clairvoyance is widespread, despite her attempt at privacy.

Recently she was arrested (a terrifying thought to most but an event Joy knew was in the cards).

"There's a law against fortune-telling, you know, and it's a good law. Don't ever think it isn't."

"I told my husband I was going to be arrested but the law protects as well as punishes. In my case it was a form of protection."

Her religious beliefs are strong and before each reading, Joy said she silently asks guidance and inspiration.

She is also a firm believer in reincarnation, feels that a person's life span is determined at birth.

That she knows when her own life will end is of little or no concern or particular worry to her: she shrugs it off as destiny.

To Eat and Buy

Mrs. William Vaughn, chairman of this year's Virginia Beach Methodist Bazaar, said that in addition to Joy Talley the Nov. 8 bazaar will feature an especially enticing luncheon and supper menu.

"The entire menu hasn't been worked up yet but we do know that Brunswick stew and barbecue will be featured for supper and a choice of either a chicken salad plate or ham at the luncheon."

And we know we'll have delicious cheese biscuits but as of now the rest has not been determined.

"We're planning an auction sale after dinner, probably around 7:45.

In addition, there'll be:

- A country store
- Flower arrangements
- Bakery booth
- Dolls with a hand-made clothes
- A clothing booth for teenagers
- White elephants
- Young folks booth (things they've made)

The doors will open at 10:30.

WOMEN INVESTORS

The Exchange:
How It Ticks

By Betty McClane

Mrs. McClane

Mrs. McClane is associated with a stock brokerage here, a member firm of the New York Stock Exchange.

(Seventh in a Series)

In the 175 years since its founding, the New York Stock Exchange has become an integral part of the economic lives of millions of people.

Twenty-two million people now own securities—a jump from six million 15 years ago. Twenty-two million people now share the rewards and risks of American enterprise.

Owning shares is no longer a rich man's privilege. The average shareholder has an income of less than $10,000 a year. This tremendous participation in share ownership has been due largely to the dynamic New York Stock Exchange.

One of the major functions of the New York Stock Exchange has been to educate the public regarding the operation of the Exchange and the benefits of share ownership. The Exchange, through its Monthly Investment Plan, also has made it easier for people of modest means to purchase securities.

Most important, the Exchange requires of its listed companies periodic reports about company operations that can help the investor make an intelligent decision. The Exchange cannot prevent the American investor from making poor judgments, but it sees that he is the best informed investor in the world.

Luncheons Headline Meetings

Bayside Jrs.

Mrs. John B. Bruce, immediate past president of the board of directors of the Florence Crittenton Home, spoke to the members of the Bayside Junior Women's Club at their October Meeting.

The topic of her speech was the need for a more liberal education for our youth in sex and family living. Mrs. Bruce felt this should be brought about in the public school system and taught by qualified and specially trained teachers.

The program was presented by the club's Junior State Project Chairman, Mrs. B.G. Spivey. The junior state project is "Youth of Our Time."

Mrs. Louanna Bare, public welfare chairman reported that members were currently working with the T.B. Center in connection with the Christmas Seal campaign.

Mrs. D.I. Cameron was elected delegate to the Tidewater District fall meeting to be held Oct. 17 in the Golden Traingle. She will accompany Mrs. M.F. Wallace, president, and Mrs. H.B. Slough, District Student Loan Fund chairman.

Home Demos.

The Virginia Beach Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs met recently in the Home Demonstration kitchen of the Court House. All the member clubs were represented by some 28 who attended.

A slate of officers for the coming year was presented; their installation is set for the group's upcoming annual Achievement Day program.

Two models: Mrs. H.H. Bryan, Mrs. J.R. Cobb.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Miss Wanda Ferrell, City Extension Agent of Home Economics. Her discussion was on the Federation: what it means to the members and what, if any, changes they would like to make.

Mrs. C.R. Reid, city chairman, conducted the meeting.

Dam Neck Wives

Dam Neck Navy Wives Club #207 launched its club year with a business meeting last Thursday in Special Services Building at Dam Neck.

The meeting followed by a week the group's installation dinner held in the Seashore Club at Oceana and attended by area military officials and friends. Among the guests were Capt. and Mrs. A.H. Galvani, Ocean Park Woman's Club celebrated its 23rd birthday last week and if the birthday celebration went to members heads, it was just as planned.

On the program for the birthday luncheon was a showing of L. Snyder hats, Mrs. G. Lyons did the commentary as members modeled.

The clubwomen invited representatives of other women's clubs, friends and the Federation president to the party held in Ocean Hearth Restaurant.

Mrs. Otis B. Gregg, president of the Tidewater District Woman's Clubs spoke to the clubwomen on the Federation, detailing its beginning, its accomplishments and purposes and its future.

"We here in Tidewater are part of a large, strong organization, International in scope, our present membership extends to some 55 countries. In the United States alone, there are 15,000 clubs."

She urged Ocean Park members to work together in harmony and to examine their community closely to determine how best to serve it.

The annual library award, a check for $100, was presented to Mrs. M. Huggle, librarian at Old Donation School.

The award is made by the club each year to a different area library; the one to Old Donation was the first such donation this school has received. The presentation was made by Mrs. Charles McCoy, educational committee chairman.

Costumed members of the Cape Henry Women's Club meet with Mrs. George Webber (left) to unpack their 'imports'. They are Mrs. R. L. Counselman (center) and Mrs. Clyde Whitehead.

Christmas in the Air Do I Smell a Gift?

A vice president of the Tidewater District, Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs, joined members of the Cape Henry Women's Club at their first meeting of the club year last week in the Ocean Heath. Mrs. J.B. Cutler was guest speaker for the club institute session which followed the luncheon.

Her subject, "Why Do We Have Women's Clubs?" was a rundown on the clubwoman's role in the community; of the accomplishments of the worldwide organization of women's clubs (largest organization in the world she said); and the importance of harmony among club members.

Decorated by members, the home will be opened to the public from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. and from 7:30 until 9:30 p.m. Dec. 6. Gift items and a Sweet Shoppe will be featured.

The club also will participate in the Pembroke Mall Charity Bazaar Oct. 20 and 21. The club's balsam fir-filled gift items will be featured.

Representing the club at the VFWC board meeting in Natural Bridge last month was Mrs. C. E. Upton Jr., president; Mrs. B. Noel Fallwell, Mrs. Arthur B. James and Mrs. R.L. Counselman.

Concluding, Mrs. Cutler said, "Service is the rent we pay for our place on earth."

Mrs. R.L. Counselman, Cape Henry Ways and Means chairman, announced the club's plans for swelling the scholarship funds treasury.

New Now: Cape Henry 'Imports'

Cape Henry's Women's Club voted to avoid the clubwomen's Christmas rush this year: they'll neither make nor bake their holiday sale items.

Instead they turned to New England for their offerings which are balsam filled (and permanently scented, they say) items to hang, place or stash away for a long-lasting fragrance.

The items have arrived and will be offered for sale at the Pembroke Mall Charity bazaar as well as at Cape Henry's Christmas open house.

St Gregory Joins Mall Bazaar Sale

St. Gregory the Great Women's Club members also will participate in the Pembroke Mall Charity Bazaar Oct. 20 and 21.

Among items for sale will be handmade furniture, oil paintings, knitted and crocheted work, holiday gift items and hand-painted wall decorations.

On Saturday, Oct. 21, Miss Susan Pilley will be on hand to do profiles and sketches.

Reports from the convention in Philadelphia also were given.

Dr. Orlando Salinas spoke at the Oct. 16 meeting of the Licensed Practical Nurse Association of Virginia, Inc., Area 18 at the Beachlawn Baptist Church.

Elsewhere Under The Sun

... Ocean Park firemen rolled out the fire engines, rolled up their sleeves and cooked up a party Saturday afternoon in the fire house on Shore Drive.

It was the Volunteer Fire Department's annual fish fry and to make room for the crowds that turn out for the feast, the spit and polish equipment was lined up outdoors and tables set up indoors.

The annual fish fry puts some much-needed cash into the department in a tasty sort of way. Furthermore, it gives the firemen a chance to dress up and greet their friends and neighbors.

Princess Anne Power Rises

Princess Anne High's unbeaten Cavaliers, with the Eastern District football championship virtually won, meets Deep Creek from neighboring Chesapeake at 8 p.m. this Friday at home to continue their bid for regional and state honors.

When Coach John Grady's team whipped the Kellam High Knights 24 to 0 last Friday in Princess Anne Borough, the Cavaliers moved to the last four games on their regular schedule against teams with losing records.

While the Cavaliers this week host the Hornets (3 and 3 for the season), the Knights meet the Cox High Falcons; the First Colonial Patriots venture to Chesapeake to battle Churchland's Truckers; Bayside's Marlins meet Oscar Smith High of Chesapeake at home, and Union Kempsville's Tigersgo Newport News to play Carver High.

George McGovern's Falcons (0 and 5 as a result of a small squad and injuries) had a rest last Friday. Thus far, the Falcons have managed to at least score against tough teams.

Marlins Meet Smith

George Versprille's Marlin team, playing this Friday at Bayside High in Bayside Borough, has lost five games since winning the opener. Craddock's defense was too much last week in a 26 to 7 loss. A Jackie Boone pass to Ray Emerson gave the Marlins their TD.

Patriots vs. Truckers

First Colonial's Les Whitehorse had easy going against Indian River's team from Chesapeake last week, as the Patriots won 20 to 6. It was the fourth straight win for Frank. They are looking for another victory against Churchland.

Last Friday, Whitehorse scrambled for all three TD's.

UK Travels

Joshua Darden's Tigers of Union Kempsville are sporting a 3-3 record thus far this season. Carver High of Chesapeake got lucky last Friday (21 to 6), but the Tigers' Houston Bailey, who never gives up, passed for a TD in the final quarter to Richard Johnson.

A team effort behind Bailey could give Carver of Newport News a tough game this Friday.

Team Effort

In the Cavaliers' victory over the Knights last Friday, Bob German threw touchdown passes to Tom Counter and Bruce Runyon; kicked a three-pointer and two extras. Dependable John Kiefer scored the third TD. Ed Love, Robert Gerloff, Mickey Byrd, Steve Sakis, Paul Ziegler and Jack Spence were outstanding on defense, coached by Al Habitt.

South vs. North

When Charlie Caldwell's Knights of Princess Anne Borough go against the Falcons at the Cox High stadium in Lynnhaven Borough, it will be a local south versus north affair.

For the Knights last Friday, 102-yard and 8-yard runs by Mike Futrell into the end zone were nullified by penalty calls.

Lauback, Emerson Crown Queen

BAYSIDE BOROUGH -- Bayside High School, opened to classes for the first time in the fall of 1964, celebrates its first homecoming this Friday night, Oct. 20, when the Bayside Marlin football team meets the Oscar Smith High team from Chesapeake.

Ray Emerson and Mark Lewback will crown the homecoming queen.

$1 Million Suit Filed

A second $1 million court suit has been filed in Virginia Beach Circuit Court against State Sen. Henry E. Howell Jr. and Landmark Communications, Inc., and officials in Norfolk.

The suit was filed Oct. 4 by Garland Layton, attorney for Ned Ballance, one of the persons involved in a controversial rezoning case still in the courts. Ballance's suit names Howell and Frank Batten, publisher of the Virginian-Pilot newspaper; Robert Mason, editor of the Virginian-Pilot newspaper, and Landmark Communications, Inc.

The suit filed in court alleges Howell attempted to influence the outcome of the July 11 Democratic primary here, or obtain publicity and votes in his behalf as a senate candidate in Norfolk. It alleges "tortious fraud and deceit as well as libel and slander by the other defendants." They have a legal right to file an answer within a certain number of days.

Horticultural exhibits from each club will be displayed at Goose Creek Country Club, meeting headquarters.

Tanglewood Garden Club which has members in Virginia Beach and Chesapeake and meets at St. Brides Episcopal Church on the boundary line between the two cities, has named Mrs. C.J. Paschang of Virginia Beach and Mrs. J.F. Kitchin of Chesapeake to represent the club at a Tidewater District Federation of Garden Clubs meeting at Lake Wright Motor Lodge Oct. 26.

The club last week prepared some Red Cross Christmas Bags for servicemen.

Kempsville Chapter No. 173, OES, has voted unanimously to send $100 to Skip Wilkins, Prince of Leesburg is the locale for the 48th annual meeting of the Board of Governors of the Garden Club of Virginia. The meeting ends today. Hostess club is the Leesburg Garden Club, Mrs. Harrison Williams, president.

Horticulture is the theme of the meeting. Attending, in addition to presidents of the 43 member clubs throughout the state, will be GCV officers, directors and chairmen of standing committees and past presidents.

Another report, in the Ledger-Star, had the tax collections showing a business increase of about 35 per cent.

An investigation by the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN determined each of the newspapers obtained their information from different offices at City Hall, and were based on different time periods for comparison.

One obtained information from the City Revenue Commissioner's office, which provided information requested for the period of June through August, based on collections tallied by that office.

The other obtained information requested from the City Finance Director's Office, and Conflict Reports In Dailies Traced

PR. ANNE BOROUGH--Conflicting reports in daily newspapers in recent days on how well the City of Virginia Beach did on room and meals tax collections apparently resulted from unfamiliarity with relationships between various offices at City Hall.

One report in The Virginian-Pilot said tourist business in the city's seven boroughs was up about 7.5 per cent during the summer of this year, based on tax collections.

Another report, in the Ledger-Star, had the tax collections showing a business increase of about 35 per cent.

An investigation by the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN determined each of the newspapers obtained their information from different offices at City Hall, and were based on different time periods for comparison.

Church with unusual beginning

Calvary Presbyterian Church has been on Kempsville Road in Kempsville Borough 6 years, but the original church was built on Glenrock Road in Norfolk about 40 years ago. The congregation was formed about 45 years ago when a visiting minister, conducting a funeral service in the then isolated area, realized the local children had no Sunday school nearby. He began holding services. The present minister is the Rev. E.C. Cooley.

New-Type Revival Set

LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH--A revival on film? That's what will start Sunday, Oct. 22, at First Colonial Baptist Church on First Colonial Road. All of the films in the week-long revival, except one, are in color and are full length. The pastor, the Rev. George T. Stallings, said that any and every honorable method of reaching people today with the message of Christ must be used. "The church is interested in reaching the youth of the area with these vital messages that concern problems of everyday life that are peculiar to all," he said.

Revival Planned

Evangelistic services will be held at London Bridge Baptist Church, 2460 Potter Rd, Oct. 22-27 at 7:30 p.m., and Oct. 29 at 11 a.m. The Rev. Floy Cox, pastor of Temple Baptist Church in Norfolk, will be the guest evangelist. He was born in Anderson County, S. C. and received his education at Furman University and the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky. He has served as pastor in Appomattox, Va., Madison Heights, Va., and Richmond, Va. During the revival the church will have "Sunday School at night". Everyone will assemble at 7:15 p.m. Ed Morton Jr., director of the church music program, is to be in charge of the music for the revival.

PTA Studies 'Strangers'

LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH--The King's Grant Elementary School PTA on Monday held a panel discussion entitled "That Stranger In Your Home... Your Child." The program was led by a panel of experts, Edward E. Brickell, upcoming superintendent of schools, Sidney W. Coren, M.D., The Rev. Sidney Sanders, rector, Eastern Shore Chapel, Lynnhaven Borough, and Grady Whicker, Old Dominion College, Norfolk. Henry Highton, PTA president, said topics proposed by parents and teachers for discussion on the program included:

- Educational innovations-New Math, New English;
 - Sunday School versus "God is Dead" philosophies;
 - Courtesy and politeness-victims of the Jet Age;
 - Sarcasm and cruelty in children's conversations;
 - Children's heavily-scheduled group activities;
 - To volunteer or not; work-horses vs. stay-at-homes;
 - The flagrantly disobedient student;
 - The mentally lazy child.
- The advantages (if any) of modern childhood and parenthood.

Princess Anne Woman's Club Celebrates 42nd Birthday

Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach, under the leadership of Mrs. M.B. Zoll, celebrated its 42nd birthday Tuesday in the Pine Tree Inn. At the luncheon and cake-cutting honoring past presidents, members heard Mrs. Frank W. Cox talk on the accomplishments of the club for the past two years. Mrs. Cox said that "under the leadership of past president Mrs. George Aldridge and with the help and assistance of officers, department chairmen, committees and members, the club brought civic, educational and cultural life to our city and general advancement and progress to all."

Two letters were read that were written by past presidents Mrs. R. H. Owen and Mrs. Robert R. Tynes 10 years ago (these letters were ones placed in capsule at Virginia National Bank). The letters contained good wishes and success to the club, and told of the accomplishments of the club during their terms of office. Mrs. E. Guy Robertson, a member for some 17 and one half years (having missed only four meetings during this time), also was honored with an special birthday cake. It was her 79th birthday. Mrs. Michael Marriott, counselor at the John Robert Powers Fashion School, presented a program, "The Magic Hat Box". A basic dress was used on a form and members were shown how to dress up or dress down a basic. The first meeting of the French Salon of the Woman's Club will be held on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 22nd, at 3 o'clock in the Club House, 524 Fairfax Avenue. The French Salon is open to all who are interested in French conversation; students and teachers of French are especially invited and to remain after the lecture for the social hour which follows. It is sponsored by the Woman's Club and by Pierre Schmitz, French Consul in Norfolk. Mrs. Bertha Fanning Taylor is chairman and founder.

Duckworth Says Textile Plants Sought for Beach

W. Fred Duckworth, recently named to the State Highway Commission by Gov. Mills E. Godwin, has taken issue with a report in a Norfolk newspaper that he called Virginia Beach a "bedroom area" for Norfolk and a "satellite" of that city.

The report, in the Oct. 20 edition of The Virginian Pilot, implied Duckworth, who also has served for years as president of the Tidewater Virginia Development Council (TVDC), should resign that post.

Duckworth issued a statement the same day and told a reporter that his remarks had been taken out of context when he made a speech before the Norfolk Rotary Club in Norfolk. He did not say whether he used the terms "bedroom area" and "satellite."

He indicated in his statement that City Treasurer V.A. Etheridge ridges of Virginia Beach, quoted in the daily newspaper story, was not at the meeting where Duckworth spoke.

The story quoted Etheridge as saying Duckworth had made "improper" remarks about Virginia Beach and should resign from TVDC.

Here is the full text of Duckworth's statement which he submitted to the Norfolk newspapers:

"I regret very much that my talk Thursday, October 19th, to the Northside Rotary Club on Little Creek Road has caused unfavorable comment on both TVDC and myself.

"All of my talks to various civic organizations are intended to strengthen and help TVDC and to the together all of the cities, towns and counties which make up TVDC from a Metropolitan standpoint.

"This is the fastest growing area in the Commonwealth of Virginia, with the possible exception of that contiguous to Washington, D.C. We all want to bring into the area as much industry as we can and to do everything we can to boost our economy.

"Yesterday, at the Northside Rotary Club, I made mention of the fact that from an industrial standpoint we need water and sewerage in the Virginia Beach area and that we need more land for industrial development.

"I also made mention of the fact that a large tract of land was presently being considered as an industrial park and that a small industrial park served by the Norfolk Southern Railroad is presently available.

"I further made mention of the fact that we must have industrial parks in order to have the land available at a fixed price and that this price should be competitive. At the Northside Rotary Club Thursday, I stated that there is a surplus of female labor in the area of Virginia Beach and that our efforts at the present time are in the textile field and that we hope to bring in some clothing manufacturing plants which can use this labor to an advantage.

"I fully realize that whatever is said in a meeting of this kind can be taken two or three ways but I certainly did not in any way mean to low-rate or criticize the City of Virginia Beach, which is one of our most staunch and strongest supporters and one that has helped TVDC as much as any other political subdivision in the Tidewater Virginia area. No malicious intent was intended or expressed."

"The Chairman of TVDC, Sidney S. Kellam, gives as much time to TVDC as any other member of our organization. "I am sure that if the public-at-large, or Mr. Etheridge himself, had been present at the Northside Rotary Club on Thursday and heard what I had to say it would not have been subject to criticism.

State Traveler Says Soviet Riots Are 'Fog'

LYNNHAVEN BOROUG-- "I lost 12 pounds, and I was afraid I would become dehydrated," said Mrs. Rachel F. Lawson of her three weeks in Moscow.

Mrs. Lawson, who lives in Appomattox, recently was in Virginia Beach visiting her niece, Mrs. G.H. Wilson of East Bay Shore Drive. She was one of 54 persons in the First International Fashion Show and Textiles Exhibit which attempted direct trade with Russia.

The trip was sponsored by the U.S. Department of Commerce to create business between the United States and Eastern European countries, Mrs. Lawson said.

"I don't drink wine or vodka, and we had been warned not to drink Russian water, I didn't like mineral water," said Mrs. Lawson. "I finally found orange juice—at 85 cents a glass. Cucumbers and tomatoes (unpeeled) were the usual breakfast menu. The Russians eat a lot of starches to make up for the lack of meat and vegetables," explained Mrs. Lawson.

"The Russians were interested in our way of life, and they asked about the race riots. We had been warned in our pre-trip briefing not to comment on the riots.

"The Russians put on a fashion show for us which displayed very up to date clothing. I suspect it was just for our benefit because we never saw anyone on the street wearing such styles, and they were not in the stores.

"The Russian women dye their hair every color of the rainbow—pink, lavender, all very bright colors."

Mrs. Lawson said that the "Swinging Six" (which has appeared in Virginia Beach) were part of the trade group to accompany the models during the shows. "The Russians are crazy about our music," she said.

Each exhibitor in the trade mission set up a booth in the display building. Close to 40,000 persons a day toured the exhibit, Mrs. Lawson said. "They don't have many places to go. Their apartments are crowded."

The trade mission also spent ten days in Warsaw, Poland; and nine in Prague, Czechoslovakia. Everywhere the group went they were treated with friendliness, she said.

"All you had to do was admirle something, and the people would give it to you." She had a deer-antler necklace given to her by an interpreter after she had admired it. "I came back to my hotel room later, and there it was," she said.

In Prague she commented favorably on a dress in a fashion show, and the manufacturer had one made in her size, complete with a pair of earrings to match.

In Warsaw she met a man who was stationed in Norfolk during World War I. He is Joseph ph Szczepkowski, who now heads a college there for English-speaking students.

Mrs. Lawson said all pictures and statues of Joseph Stalin have been removed in Moscow. "The people worship Lenin. There is no belief in God except among the older citizens. Moscow has a population of eight million, but has only 58 churches. There are no worship services. Most of the churches are now museums," she said.

Mrs. Lawson and her son are in charge of manufacturing Mary Jane dresses in Appomattox which are designed and distributed by C.H. & E. Freyberg Inc. of New York. She was their representative on the trip, which lasted from Aug. 16 to Sept. 25.

"We were delayed seven hours in leaving Moscow," said Mrs. Lawson. "We were told it was because of fog. We found out later it was 'political fog.' There were riots in one of the cities where the plane was due to stop."

"I made a lot of friends," Mrs. Lawson said. "And I discovered that with a smile you can go a long way in this world."

The promotion of Mrs. Carolyn McAllen to women's editor of the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN was announced today by Chet Paschang, managing editor.

Mrs. McAllen replaces Jeanne Magee Tucker, who recently resigned after a year in the position. The new women's editor has been with the SUN for the past year and has assisted the former women's editor as well as serving in other supervisory positions and as a news writer.

"We are planning various improvements in our local newspaper to improve its service to all of the people in Virginia Beach, and they will be evident in future weeks," Paschang said in making the announcement.

Mrs. McAllen, a native of Memphis, Tenn., and graduate of the University of Missouri, is married to Charles W. McAllen, who works with the local United Communities Fund. They have three children and live in Kings Grant here.

The new women's editor, since coming to this region seven years ago, was employed by the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce and the Virginia Beach public school system. Prior to then, she was associated with newspapers in El Paso, Houston and Texarkana, Texas.

Rep. Downing Plans Office Here by Dec. 1

U.S. Rep. Thomas N. Downing of Virginia's First Congressional District said he plans to establish a local office in the City of Virginia Beach, but has not decided where it will be located.

The VIRGINIA BEACH SUN queried Downing in a phone interview last Friday about reports of his plans for an office to better serve local people.

"I am going to put a district office there," he said. "The only problem now is the location with the office space."

He said he "hopes" to have the office open by the first of to warrant one," Hatchett said.

Asked where he might suggest Downing locate the office, the city manager said it could be anywhere in the city, "as long as it's within Virginia Beach."

Besides Virginia Beach, Downing's congressional district includes the cities of Newport News, Hampton, and Williamsburg and the counties of Accomack, Gloucester, James City, Mathews, Middlesex, Northampton and York.

Hatchett mentioned the possibility of locating Downing's office at City Hall, which is near the geographic center of the city. But he said Downing might want to put the office north of Princess Anne Court House where more people live.

"It would save people the time and effort of going to Washington" and of risking highway accidents, Hatchett said of Downing's plans. "It would be fine if the office could be conveniently located with a secretary who could make appointments."

Downing's decision on the office location might stem from the number of expanding commercial centers in the various boroughs of the city, particularly the Beach, Lynnhaven, Bayside and Kempsville boroughs.

The major, or largest commercial centers of activity are now along the Beach Borough's resort area, at Pembroke in Bayside Borough, at Princess Anne Plaza in Lynnhaven Borough and on Military Highway in Kempsville Borough.

New businesses, however, are opening in or around such older commercial areas as London Bridge, Robbins Corner, Kemp-sville's main intersection, Shore Drive at Pleasure House Road and Aragona Village Shopping Center.

Air Pollution Comes From Outside of Beach

PR. ANNE COURT HOUSE-- The Virginia Beach City Council has adopted a resolution asking that the city be included in an air-pollution-control district proposed by the state government for Hampton Roads.

Council approved the resolution at a public meeting Monday after City Manager W. Russell Hatchett said he has received air-pollution complaints from persons flying over the city, but they don't know "a lot of this air pollution is coming in on us, and it's not created here."

BADGES & BANTER

Men of the Princess Anne Plaza volunteer fire company are campaigning for their favorite candidate. New officers will take over at the station the first of next year. Bob Myers says nominees for unit officers will be chosen next month for the December election.

A "pot luck" supper will be served this Saturday night at the Beach Borough fire station on Arctic Avenue. Sponsored by the ladies auxiliary, the supper is open to the families of all men of the Beach Borough's paid, volunteer and civil defense units.

Although men attached to the Beach Borough's Shore Patrol station are rightly proud of being in the U.S. Navy, they also support the other Armed Forces. Decals displayed around their office read: "WE SERVE PROUDLY.....U.S. ARMY".

Officer Richard T. (Dick) Munford, a member of the skin diving squad of the Virginia Beach police division, came in for some good-natured ribbing last week. Dressed in "SCUBA" gear, Munford went into Lake Smith to recover a submerged auto. He had signaled for a tow rope from shore, after finding the keys still in the car's ignition. A fellow officer from shore called out: "You have the keys Dick, why not just drive it out like a good fellow?"

Here's a reminder to all volunteer and paid firemen in Virginia Beach. Next Monday, October 31, is the deadline for nominations for the "Fireman Of The Year" award in Virginia Beach. All nominations must be mailed or taken to Chief E. B. Bayne, at the Beach Borough station on Arctic Avenue.

Officers of the Youth Bureau, attached to police headquarters at Princess Anne Courthouse, certainly have a high regard for their "girl Friday," Miss Marlene Pierce. There is no question about their esteem for her when she is addressed as "Sgt." Pierce.

Improvements are underway at the Kempsville fire station, involving remodeling of the men's living quarters. Al Basnight says he believes the new quarters will be ready within a very short time.

It's pretty apparent Sgt. E. B. Hamlett of the 3rd Police Precinct, in Bayside Borough, is rather fond of "Southern" dishes. When a recent discussion of food turned to such delicacies, Hamlett really came alive. At the mention of "collard greens," he gave a sigh of contentment, his eyes brightened, and his mouth watered.

Goblins Can Spook Safely

The Virginia Beach Safety Council this week offered some advice for small youngsters and parents who will be roaming streets as the children go "trick or treat" next Tuesday evening.

Here is what a spokesman for the safety council had to say, with an extra note for those who will stay at home:

The Virginia Beach Safety Council wants to remind parents that the biggest goblin on Halloween is old man accident. All too often costumes limit vision and the young trick or treaters not only is not paying full attention to traffic conditions but the excitement of the evening causes a lapse in good safety habits.

Be sure you know where your children are going! Go over the route with them in the daytime. Point out obstacles to be avoided—such as ditches, walls, and busy roadways. Preschoolers should NEVER GO ALONE. Parents are the best safety first guide for little witches and pirates. Be sure costumes are fire proof, walking and movement of arms and head should not be restricted. Too light or flapping outerwear are potential danger areas. Flashlights are a must for guides and goblins.

In late summer and fall many homeowners wonder why certain trees and shrubs fail to produce a good crop of fruit or none at all. The reasons for fruit failure include:

Rainy weather during the pollination season will prevent the proper fertilization of plants, and consequently a poor crop of fruit will set.

Dry weather causes the fruit to drop prematurely. Mulching the plants well during spring and summer helps conserve soil moisture.

Improper pruning reduces the potential amount of fruit.

Some plants are dioecious, meaning the male and female flower parts are found on separate plants, and only the female plants will have fruit. To have berries on plants of this type, it is necessary to have male and female plants within a reasonable distance of each other. A few of the more common ornamental plants which are dioecious are: American holly, Acuba, Bayberry, Bittersweet, Cotinus (or smoke tree), Deciduous holly, Ginkgo, Japanese Taxus.

VBLT Opening Play Is a 'Happy Success'

The opening production of the Virginia Beach Little Theatre 1967-68 season, "The Amorous Flea," is a happy success, and is performed with the excellence of a professional company.

The light, farce comedy turned musical is first of all a good play with nice music. The book, by Jerry Devine, is a not so literal adaption of Moliere's "School for Wives."

The action which takes place in Paris in 1685, revolves around a very foppish and foolish old man who decides to give himself in marriage to his young and beautiful ward after his rather interesting life with other men's wives. To be certain of her sweet innocence, he keeps her locked up behind a wall and across a moat, guarded by two less than loyal servants.

The production is skillfully directed by Penny Martin who never misses a chance for the inherent comedy but holds a tight rein on her cast. The remarkable underplay of the foppishness of the Restoration period is evident and appreciated.

Faye Mackinnon has done a fine job with the small cast for a musical. The voices are all pleasant and the musical numbers, while one will not come away whistling any of the tunes, are all done with a professional air. The "all shades of pink" costumes are artfully designed and executed by Peggie MacArthur.

It is Neal Thomas' stylized black and white set which really shines in this production. The street scene becomes a garden with a noiseless and rapid shift of the middle part of the scenery. It is one of the most effective and practical sets seen at the Courtyard Playhouse.

Each member of the cast rates superlatives, but Mac Manus, as the old fool, really outdoes himself and turns in the best, most consistent performance of his career in this area. Anne Parkinson, as the young girl, has all the sweetness necessary and her facial expressions add tremendously to her successful characterization.

Bill Walker, as the serious young lover, not only has a fine singing voice, but gives real pathos to his role. But it is the antics of Shirley Fentress and Pete Scoppa, as the two saucy scallawag servants, that add much spice and brightness to the show. John MacArthur, Norrie Martin and Bill Utley complete the well-rounded cast in fine style in their minor roles.

Mary Jane Utley at the piano supplies the accompaniment quite professionally.

The season opener was applauded long and hard by the opening night black tie audience. The applause is well deserved and the efforts of the Virginia Beach Little Theatre players have turned in a beautiful production. JOSEPH LOWENTHAL, JR.

Let's examine the many advantages of the passbook account.

1. With passbook savings you add or withdraw funds as you please... earnings may be retained in the account to compound.
2. The money in your account is free from speculative risk and the unpredictable ups and downs of the stock market.
3. You always know your balance at a glance and can easily tabulate what your savings have earned... or the sum needed to complete your goal.
4. No huge minimum balance is required to qualify for the generous rate we pay on passbook savings.
5. There are no unusual restrictions to cause you inconvenience upon withdrawal.
6. You need not lock up savings for an extended period of time to earn a good rate of return.
7. There is no certificate requiring safe-keeping.
8. Passbook savings earn our current rate; whereas many certificates of deposit pay you less than the advertised yield if you redeem them prior to the term stated on the certificate.

These are the reasons why most savers make a passbook savings account their first choice for profitable employment of family cash reserves. If your aims are the same, then a passbook-handy savings account at our association should be your choice, too.

About City and Regional Needs

Vice Mayor Robert B. Cromwell Jr. wasted few words when he spoke to members of the Virginia Beach Development Council last week.

And his words conveyed some very sound advice on ideas for all of our people to consider---some requiring immediate study, and others already being studied by our community's political, civic and business leaders.

The Virginia Beach Development Council, with E. R. Cockrell as chairman, is attempting to help our local government's officials plan for future needs in this fast-growing city with an increasingly greater economic future.

While Mr. Cockrell is more familiar with the rural areas in this city of seven boroughs, Mr. Cromwell is attuned to the needs of those in the suburbs, where pleasant living is a part of the pursuit of happiness. And he looks to the future with keen vision on the need for continued long-range planning for future years.

He specifically commented on several matters which the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN has brought to the attention of our community's leaders in recent editions.

They are:

1) The necessity to broaden the city government's tax base by continued efforts to bring acceptable kinds of industry into our city, while not forgetting those here today.

2) The need to consider, with neighboring cities, the location of a regional airport site with enough space on land and clearance in the air space above to take large commercial jet aircraft. Some now being developed will be unable to use Norfolk Municipal Airport, considered "inadequate" even for today's needs.

3) A canal system which, while being developed primarily for drainage purposes now, eventually will be suitable for boat navigation when completed in future years.

4) A mass transit system to meet future needs in the suburbs, where more homes, businesses and relatively small industrial plants are locating now.

Present industrial efforts by our city government, in cooperation with the Tidewater Virginia Development Council, the Virginia Beach Industrial Authority and other government agencies, are progressing as sure as can be expected. But they could receive increased attention.

Concern among area planners now on the limited physical nature of the present Norfolk airport is well founded, as the SUN pointed out earlier.

The canal system, planned to help community development and living in all of our city's boroughs, is something on which planning should continue while canal sections are dredged on a sound financial basis, with consideration for taxpayers.

The need for a mass transportation system is certainly a matter for future planning, perhaps as part of a regional plan for Southeastern Virginia. This, of course, requires cooperation among the communities, despite some narrow-minded political powers in downtown Norfolk.

With proper planning and foresight, improvements will come for those who have faith in our city, to which tourism, construction, agriculture, commerce and military bases each contribute much at present.

Sanctimonious Secrets There?

As a good friend of ours would say, "By golly, they're at it again."

That friend's words seem to apply every time we read in The Virginian-Pilot about the so-called "secret" or "closed doors" meetings involving our City Council and School Board in Virginia Beach.

The newspaper which apparently figures there's no place like Norfolk because it is published there had better look in its own backyard before criticizing our city officials.

There are what some people call "executive sessions" of councils and school boards all over the nation. And there are always debates about them, particularly in daily newspapers. We recall one some years

A Loyalty Lesson?

The recent choice of C. Bernard Brown, a Virginia Beach insurance man, as First District chairman for the Republican Party came as a surprise to many, including some members of the GOP in our community.

We offer our congratulations to a local man who has been a loyal Republican for a long time. Perhaps it is his reward for party loyalty.

Secrets There?

back in Norfolk that stirred a political witches' brew.

Professional newspaper reporters tend to frown on closed meetings of city councils, unless they know that the business being conducted at the meetings is proper. And nine times out of ten it is, regardless of rumors.

But when it comes to secret get-togethers, the grapevine and rumor mill in Norfolk is always stirring about who slipped in, or slipped out of those Monday meetings at Norfolk's City Hall. What bothers us is we seldom, if ever, read anything about the Norfolk ones in The Virginian Pilot. We can't help wondering why.

A Loyalty Lesson?

Lights Needed

Dear Editor:

Please forgive me for writing on this plain paper, but my tablet is out and I had to borrow it.

I read in one of the Norfolk papers about that horrible crime in Norfolk. I think it is terrible when peaceful citizens can't go on the streets. My child is only a baby now, but unless something is done to get more light in the streets in some areas of Norfolk, I am not going in there again.

It is just one person's opinion, I guess, but I think one of the problems in big center cities today is a serious lack of the right lighting at night. It is not so bad in our city where there are pretty good lights in some places, and the police are there to protect us. But when I want to shop in downtown Norfolk, I have to go through Berkley and other places that don't have very good street lights.

I like your paper and hope you are doing okay with the bigger ones. Before we moved here, I took a weekly in Illinois, and it's really the thing to know what is going on in our community. Local news is still the most pleasant to read when I am not playing chess or bridge.

Against Whiskey

Dear Editor:

From time to time we are faced with whiskey by the drink in the state of Virginia. I think all law abiding citizens who profess to be Christians should be against Whiskey by the drink, or bottle or in any form. We should do all we can to get rid of it.

Our state police tell us that a large percent of the accidents caused on the highways are connected with alcohol in one

City Plan Offers Degrees; Job Training

(Editor's Note: The following is only the Vocational School and College Parts of the Virginia Beach city government's Master Plan Report Number 7, concerning future community facilities for education. It is now being considered by City Council as a recommendation from the City School Board and City Planning Commission to meet projected needs to 1985.)

"There is currently being planned for Virginia Beach an area vocational school, an educational institution devoted to the preparation of young people for various occupations and designed to help meet the specific employment needs of the local community. Both state and federal agencies assist in funding of area vocational schools, and a good portion of both construction costs (30%) and equipment costs (75%) will be borne by these agencies.

"It is contemplated that the area vocational school will accommodate approximately 600 students each 'shift,' with two 'shifts' per day being scheduled for public school students; additional classes will be made available to adults during the evening hours. In total, then, the school would be in operation daily for approximately ten hours, bringing to the community specialized training opportunities not presently offered.

"The area vocational school in Virginia Beach should be in operation in 1969, with a full program underway by 1970.

"In addition to the vocational training available at the area school, related academic work will still be a part of the high school program of regularly-enrolled pupils; it is expected that these studies will be pursued in the regular comprehensive high school, with students being transported to the vocational school for their work there. No phase of fundamental academic work will be neglected, since the ability to read and compute will be necessary to later shop or technical success.

"In brief, the goals of the area vocational school might be enumerated as follows:

1. To equip each individual with the knowledge and skills needed to get and to hold a job and to make a worthwhile and personally satisfying contribution to the community.
2. To meet the manpower needs of the community.
3. To aid in helping to solve the problems of unemployment.
4. To help to raise the standard of living for people whose family income is low because of limited earning capacity.

"The city is allotting sufficient time to planning for the area vocational school in order to avoid some of the pitfalls detected in earlier ventures by some sister communities. For instance, it is imperative that the public comprehend that the vocational school should not be expected to accomplish more than its objectives; all too frequently, in all too many communities, the vocational school has been considered the panacea for dropouts. Nothing could be further from fact and reality. The vocational school has a contributory role to play in the education and the retraining of both youth and adults, but it does not offer the cure-all for our educational, economic, or social ills, nor should it be looked to for such.

"The need is pressing for more and better vocational education opportunities for all people, if economic enterprise in the city is to remain strong and vigorous, if our productive capacities are to continue to grow, and if all citizens of Virginia Beach are to realize the fullness of their occupational potential. The community has demonstrated its understanding of this need and has indicated a willingness to provide facilities, capital, and time necessary to meet it.

REPORT

"The 1966 General Assembly enacted legislation creating a system of community colleges in Virginia, and the City of Virginia Beach has made application to be one location for such an institution.

First Colony Plans Rate Cut

PUNGO—Further reductions in charges for telephone users in the First Colony Telephone Company will apply to interstate long distance calling, it was announced by Gerald H. Parks, president of the independent with a franchise in Princess Anne and Pungo boroughs of Virginia Beach.

The telephone user will benefit in three ways: Lower charges on many calls; longer time periods and added days (Saturdays and certain holidays) when low rates apply; and a new "Midnight to 7" special dial rate with a 75 cent maximum within the U.S. continental limits.

The changes would include: The 8-1/2 hour span of the present night rate will be extended to 12 hours. To be named "After 7 and Weekend," it will extend from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. each weekday, plus all day both Saturday and Sunday. At the longest distance, the rate is $1 for a three-minute station-to-station call.

The "After 7 and Weekend" rate also will apply all day on Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's Day, July 4th and Labor Day. The effect in 1968 will be 109 days—Saturdays, Sundays and holidays—when the "After 7 and Weekend" rate applies.

Daytime station rates beyond 468 miles will be lowered and the maximum for a call across the country will drop from $2.00 to $1.75 for the first three minutes. The new "Weekday" station rates will apply from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The present evening rate period will begin an hour earlier, becoming 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. each weekday and will be named "After 5." The rate for maximum distance will be lowered from $1.50 to $1.25 for the first three minutes of a station-to-station call.

A new "Midnight to 7" special dial rate will be introduced, featuring a 75 cent maximum for a call across the country. The rate will apply from midnight to 7 a.m., seven days a week, for station-to-station calls dialed by the customer from non-coin telephones. Credit card, collect, or other calls needing operator assistance will not be included. The new "Midnight to 7" special dial rate and the extension of the night rate will be of special benefit to both residence and business users on the Pacific coast in placing calls to the East coast.

Person-to-person rates will also be lowered. The maximum daytime rate for three minutes will drop from $3.50 to $3.30. After 5 p.m., the maximum will be reduced from $3.00 to $2.85 for the first three minutes.

Included are rate increases for some interstate calls from 0 to 24 miles. None of these increases will be more than 5 cents for the initial period. These increases are needed to improve the relationship between costs and charges for short-distance telephone calls, a problem common to both the Bell System and the independent telephone companies. A First Colony spokesman said, a party....

By Carolyn McAllen

Hey, Daddy, What's Your Name?

One local television newscaster begins his 11 p.m. newscast with, "It's late. Do you know where your children are?"

The following incident might well cause you to ask "Does my child know where I am?"

The situation would have been funny if it hadn't been so desperate.

The incident is true and happened the day of the recent teachers' meeting when the children had a holiday from school. A local saleswoman invited another first grader to spend Thursday night with her six-year-old girl. Then she was going to leave the girls at the other child's house while she worked Friday.

The mother, Mrs. X, picked the girls up at their school. It was as normal a night as two energetic little girls can have.

The problem arose the next morning. The visiting child did not know her address. Further questions revealed that the child did not know her father's first name or initials. Her last name was a common one, although spelled differently.

So, they started driving around in the general area of the school zone, hoping the girl would spot something familiar. She saw two church steeples that she thought she recognized but nothing more.

Mrs. X returned to her office with the two kids in tow. She called the School Administration office to see if there was a master file of students. There wasn't, but the operator said that someone was at each school despite the holiday.

Next Mrs. X called the office where a maid told her all the records were locked up. But the maid went to the child's classroom and managed to find her registration card. She told Mrs. X an address on "Mo" street.

There's no such street in Virginia Beach. Just to make sure, Mrs. X called the Planning Commission where Mason Gamage confirmed her fears.

Mrs. X, although a calm woman, was getting somewhat panicky. It was getting later in the morning, and she had clients to see.

Then the child remembered her school bus number and driver's last name (also a common one). However, nobody answered the telephone at the school bus office.

In desperation, Mrs. X took the two girls out again, vowing to try one more time and if she couldn't find the house, she'd keep the child until the parents called to inquire.

A happy Mrs. X, phoned her office about 20 minutes later to report success. The "Mo" had really been a number. Everybody was happy again.

But what a senseless occurrence. Almost any child from four years of age on should learn his father's complete name at least. And any child should know his address before getting foot in first grade. In fact, it's the policy of many kindergartens to teach the children this.

It should be pointed out, however, that this particular child was from a military family and had only lived in the area a few months. So many military families change addresses often, which must be confusing to a young child. The situation could be more common than we know.

Also, children often know only a parent's nickname, rather than the real one. "Mac," "Jim" or "Bert" is not much help unless they can be related to the real name.

Christmas shopping time is approaching rapidly. I guess we'll be hearing even more of the "We have a little boy about three years old at the information desk" announcements in the local stores. Will yours be the one?

North Carolina June German Club members had their second annual fall party at the Ocean Hearth... which included swapping tales and reminiscing about "the good old days" in North Carolina and ending with the singing of "Carolina Moon."

Cavalier Junior Woman's Clubbers had their second annual Neptune Ball at Bow Creek Golf and Country Club with members of the Norfolk Neptune football team (many of whom live in Virginia Beach) as guests. Paul Duda received the club's award as "most popular Neptune."

Ninth Annual

Antique Show Opens Today

BEACH BOROUGH--The Ninth Annual Antiques Show, sponsored by the Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach, literally was to open today with a bang at 11 a.m., at the Civic Center with shots fired by the U.S. Coast Guard Color Guard.

Some of the past show chairmen met informally over cookies and coffee recently at the home of this year's chairman, Grace (Mrs. Earl) DuVal on 16th Street to discuss past shows.

"I didn't even know the second vice president would be in charge of the show," laughed Estelle (Mrs. Bernard) Batleman, who headed the first show in 1959. "I was a new member then." But she took the job for a second year in 1960.

The Blue Law was the biggest problem faced by the second chairman, Doris (Mrs. Joseph)

DeCreny in 1961-62. "We were worried about opening on Sunday. Other shows in Virginia were being closed," she said. "We finally settled it by opening at 1 p.m. after churches were out."

A question of a $500 peddlers' license for each exhibitor also arose, but that was settled without trouble.

Virginia (Mrs. Joseph) Sadler was chairman in 1963 and 64 and Margaret (Mrs. J. James) Davis headed the project in 1965. All were successful years.

In 1966 Mrs. Erma Mott took the helm. She is co-chairman this year. "The club appointed me chairmen, then they elected me second vice president," said Mrs. Mott. "I figured, what have I got to lose?"

"Every chairman and her group have tried to up grade the show," commented Mrs.

DuVal. "That's getting hard to do."

According to Mrs. Batleman, the project originally was selected because the club wanted a money-making project that would be different from the usual ones.

In its nine years the show has earned nationwide recognition. Mrs. DuVal said one motel recently received a reservation from a woman in California who wanted to attend the show. Exhibitors from Maine to Florida have reserved space this year.

Community Day To Have Mrs. Jones

BAYSIDE BOROUGH--World Community Day, the ecumenical program to be observed by church women throughout the world on Friday, Nov. 3, will be held locally at Old Donation Episcopal Church on North Witchduck Road beginning at 11 a.m.

The wedding will take place at First Presbyterian Church, graduate of Decorah High School in Decorah, Iowa.

Do Pity Housewives

New York--Now there's proof that woman's work is less often done than man's. A 14-nation study made by a United Nations agency shows that mothers, both working and non-working, in Communist and capitalist countries alike, have less free time than their husbands. Here are the facts:

In the U.S., the working mother has an average of 2.8 hours of free time on weekdays and 7.1 hours on Sundays. The non-working mother has about 3.5 hours free on weekdays and about 7.5 hours on Sundays.

The working father, in contrast, has about 4.1 hours leisure time on weekdays, and 8.5 hours on Sundays. What is meant by free time? Time available for education, organizations, spectator activities, sports, walking, social life, radio, television, reading, conversation, resting.

Navy Wives' Club Notes

PR. ANNE BOROUGH--Members of the Dam Neck Navy Wives Club of America No. 207 had a pre-Navy Day luncheon last week in honor of their husbands. Navy Day is Oct. 27.

Mushrooms Liven Winter Meal Planning

Mushrooms make a simple omelet into a delicious main dish—morning, noon or night.

Every "good cook" is on the alert for new recipes which will please her family. Variety in her meal planning is one of the virtues which has helped her earn this envied title. Let mushrooms add variety to your meal planning.

Fresh mushrooms are available almost all year 'round with peak supply in your market October through May. Canned mushrooms, whole or sliced are always in good supply.

When shopping, look for firm, creamy white to beige colored mushrooms with rounded caps and undersides that are smooth and closed around the stems. Size is not an indication of quality or maturity.

Store mushrooms in your refrigerator; they will remain in prime condition for about 5 days. If not used within that time, mushrooms may be frozen by simply placing in rigid container and sealing—washing is not necessary.

FLUFFY MUSHROOM OMELET
2 sliced fresh mushrooms or 1 can (3 or 4 oz.) sliced mushrooms
2 T. diced onion

2 T. butter or margarine
1 pkg. (2 oz.) white sauce mix
3 eggs, separated
3/4 teas. baking powder
1/4 teas. salt
1/16 teas. ground black pepper

If using fresh mushrooms (approximately 1/4 lb.) saute 3 to 5 min. with onion and 1 T. of the butter. Using canned mushrooms, drain and saute in same manner as fresh. Prepare white sauce according to package directions. Stir in mushrooms. Set aside. Beat egg yolks with milk and baking powder until well blended. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks are formed. Fold egg yolk mixture into egg whites. Melt remaining 1 T. butter in 9 or 10 inch skillet; pour in egg mixture. Cook over low heat about 5 min. Transfer skillet to preheated moderate oven (375 F.) and bake 5 min. or until lightly brown. Remove from skillet and fold omelet in half. Spoon mushroom sauce into center and over top of omelet. Yield: 2 servings

RISOTTO WITH MUSHROOMS

2 1/2 c. sliced fresh mushrooms or 1 can (6 to 8 oz.) sliced mushrooms
1/4 c. olive or salad oil
1/2 c. finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic, finely minced
2 T. lemon juice
1/4 teas. tarragon leaves

Changes Of Market Explained

By Betty McClane

(Last in a Series)

"What did the market do today?" The question is asked millions of times, but what does it mean?

The answer most commonly given, and the one the typical investor seems to expect, is the change in the Dow-Jones Average from the previous day.

This is the "down 2" or "up 4" that is usually given by brokers and newspapers.

The Average is given in points, not dollars. Thirty major industrial companies such as Alcoa, DuPont, General Motors, U.S. Steel are used in computing the Average. Allowance is made for stock splits and changes in listings through a rather complicated formula.

The "DJI" is not truly representative of all the listed stocks as it contains only some of the giants of American industry. However, it is widely used as an indication of "what the market is doing."

Though Standard and Poor's Index is not used as frequently or given as much publicity, it is more refined and accurate. It uses 500 stocks to give a broad sampling and employs precise statistical formulas to give a truer indication of market moves.

Now that great use is being made of high speed computers, it is possible to obtain an average of all the stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange as well as how many have advanced versus the number of declines. This enables the investor to have a really accurate picture of just what the daily trend is.

There are several other averages and indexes computed in various ways and used for different purposes. The three mentioned here are most widely used and easily obtained. Their value is debatable, particularly for the investor who is purchasing securities for the long term.

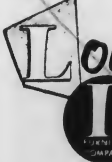

As an indication of an upward or downward trend, they can be helpful in timing stock purchases.

The true value of a security is far more important to the investor, however, than what the market did today.

IT'S FOR YOU DEAR, AND HURRY. IT'S LONG DISTANCE.

How many times have you heard that? "It's for you." Just when you've gone upstairs, or to the other end of the house. "It's for you." Just when you're in the middle of mixing a cake. Well, put an end to it. Put an extension phone in the kitchen, or the bedroom. Or wherever it could save you the most time and trouble. And if you can't decide, order two. Craddock Admirals 'Obstacle' to Cavalier Title

The undefeated Princess Anne High Cavaliers, with Coach John Grady at the helm, face another tough gridiron team—Craddock of Portsmouth—at Princess Anne's stadium at 8 p.m. this Friday night.

Although overlooked by daily newspapers, quarterback Bob Gorman directed the Princess Anne squad to 304 yards in ground gains despite an alert Hornet secondary.

Grady mentioned Paul Ziegler and Bruce Runyon for their defensive play against the Hornets. Steve Sakis and even little Chuck Kelly were in on the tackles.

Defensive coach Al Habit and backfield coach Dennis Haglan will have some surprise performers when the Craddock Admirals come to town, hoping to nip the Cavaliers.

The Craddock Admirals, despite their 3 and 3 season record, could spoil the Cavalier bid for the Eastern District championship and state honors. Norview's Pilots, with only one loss, are still in the running.

After the Cavaliers barely whipped the Deep Creek Hornets by a 27 to 19 score last Friday for a 13th straight win, Grady told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN some of the better players apologized for not playing their best.

Nevertheless, Grady said John Kiefer "did a real fine job" in scoring three of the touchdowns and making long gains behind superb blocking. Pete Carpenter scored the last Cavalier TD, after Biff Pearson recovered a Hornet fumble, and joined Ed Love in blocking a Deep Creek extra-point try in the final minute.

Kellam Jayvees Win; Marlins Battle Braves

The Junior Marlins of Bayside High, with a 1-2-1 record, go after their second win at 7:30 p.m. today, at home in Bayside Borough, against the Kempsville High Braves (2-1-3 for the season).

Kellam High's junior varsity, coached by Roy Ammons and Adrian Brown, beat the Cox High Jayvees 20 to 7 last Thursday for the sixth straight victory. A game originally scheduled this week against Indian River was canceled.

In last Thursday's game, Grady Maddox scored twice on the ground and passed to Ronnie Combs for three Kellam Jayvee touchdowns.

Stuart Holland's Falcon Jayvees, 2-1-2 for the season, meet the Oscar Smith Jayvees at Cox High in Lynnhaven Borough at

Tracy L. Moon's Braves lost against the Cavalier junior varsity last Thursday, making the Braves record 2-1-3. Moon said Steve Dunstan "played a good game."

Donald Van Benschoten's Cavalier Jayvees won their third game in five by beating the Braves 7 to 0. David Haster scored the touchdown. The

Tom Chipok passed for a Marlin TD in the Jayvee game last week, when the team tied the Granby Juniors 7-7.

Knights Host Granby Comets This Friday

PR. ANNE BOROUGH--Charles Caldwell's Knights of Kellam High School, with a 4 and 2 record after last week's 26 to 7 victory over the Cox Falcons, tangle with the Granby Comets of Norfolk at 8 p.m. this Friday in a home game.

"It's going to be another tough ball game," Caldwell told the VIRGINIA BEACH SUN. "We feel like it ought to be a toss-up."

The Comets, with a 2-4 record after last week's loss to the Norview Pilots, will have to contend with Bob Carson, who scored two touchdowns last week, and Mike Futrell, who scored one on the ground and passed to Dooley Bizzell for another.

Caldwell said David Land, Field Selby, David Trax and Bizzell were good on defense last week, and Trax and Bizzell also played well on offense. Chuck Connolly also was outstanding on defense.

Marlins Face Pilot Power

BAYSIDE BOROUGH--"They know they're going to face one of the best teams in the Eastern District, and they'll have to play way over their heads."

George Versprille, coach of the Bayside High Marlins, was explaining how his varsity team feels about this Friday's game at 8 p.m. at Norview.

The Marlins have lost six games in a row, but managed to score 19 points against Smith High last week.

In the 19 to 27 loss, Ray Emerson scored two TD's and Jackie Boone scored one. Versprille said Gary Parisi, John Bowles, Ron Colson and Jinx Myers played outstanding ball.

Debbie Stone reigned as homecoming queen at Cox High last Friday night.

Cox Falcons Meet Smith; Patriots Away

LYNNHAVEN BOROUGH--While the First Colonial Patriots travel to Benning, Va., for a football game this Friday night, the Cox High Falcons will take on the Oscar Smith Tigers in a game at Cox High here.

Coach Frank Webster, whose Patriots had won four games in a row before losing to the powerful Churchland eleven 6 to 0 last week, said: "We were inside the 8-yard line twice and didn't score."

Coach George McGovern of the Falcons let out a secret about last week's game. Both quarterbacks, Nick Randazzo and Al Ross, had injuries. Keith Sudduth filled in most of the game, which the Falcons lost 7 to 26 in Kellam High.

Sun Review

Cavalier Play Is Worth Seeing

"The Paisley Convertible" written and directed by Harry Cauley is pleasant and funny sex comedy, and is well produced at Cavalier Dinner Playhouse. It is billed as the story of the ups and downs of a young marriage, and the story has more twists and turns than a Grand Prix race course.

As with many comedies, the first act is weak, possibly because so much exposition must be jammed into a short span of time before anything funny can be said. But the Cavalier production is further hampered by the incredibly slow pace set by two of the major characters during this crucial time.

By the time Act II rolls around, the laugh lines begin to flow fast and furiously and by Act III the play has developed into a real side-splitter and an excellent frothy bit of farce comedy.

"The premise is a little hard to believe, but not entirely so. A young intern and his wife of six weeks have a major spat over each other's premarital experiences, or in this case, whether anything ever happened to either. The spat develops into a split as the appearance of one ex-boyfriend and one ex-girlfriend get into the act. The eventual and obvious solutions to all the problems make for a most amusing evening.

Elma O'Neal, as the young wife, does a most acceptable job in the latter part of the play, but it is her sing song whine and tedious voice patterns which contribute greatly to the slowness of the opening act. She moves well and looks the part but also has a slight tendency to mug.

Glenn Graham, as perhaps a shade immature as the intern, but turns in nice performance, especially near the end of the play. His drunk scene could use more drunkenness to be believable, however.

Spice is really added with the appearance of Vi Ragan as the girl's mother. Her comedy timing is excellent, and her beautiful voice adds all the right touches to the production.

Vince Bryant as the ex-boyfriend and nature lover, turns in a thoroughly enjoyable characterization as the health nut who works as a motor vehicle examiner and part-time male model for an art school. His thickness of mind and blundering ability are very funny.

And Melinda Sowden as the socialite ex-girlfriend is downright delightful. Her voice, facial expressions and excellent carriage all add up to a great performance.

The costumes were not spectacular, but well done.

Don't look for a multi-colored open car, but do look for a brightly colored sofa-bed on the stage of the Cavalier Dinner Playhouse. That's "The Paisley Convertible" and it is well worth looking for. JOSEPH LOWENTHAL, JR.

Virginia Wesleyan Expects Start on Library in December

BAYSIDE BOROUGH--Virginia Wesleyan College officials have indicated construction will start in December of this year on a library for the relatively young educational institution on the west edge of Bayside Borough here.

Virginia Wesleyan here has about 155 students in the regular academic program this fall, and more than 100 persons taking evening classes under a new program.

New members recently elected to officer positions on the board of trustees are Mrs. William P. Ballard, secretary, and Robert Friend Boyd, treasurer.
